Reagan Slashes, Signs $5.1 Billion California Budget

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California began the new fiscal year today with a $5,093,306,586 state budget, and the legislature set about the task of getting it out of the red.

Gov. Ronald Reagan late last night whacked $43.5 million from the spending program approved by the lawmakers and signed the budget into law less than three hours before the midnight deadline.

The Senate Finance Committee was to act today on the $1 billion tax bill the governor said he needs to put the state back on a firm financial footing.

RED INK

The budget Reagan signed at 9:07 p.m. was $600 million out of balance. Finance Director Gordon P. Smith told newsmen a $194 million cash deficit, $120 million in property tax relief and other items brought tax needs to $950 million.

"I have done what I promised I would do," Reagan said, announcing his $43.5 million cutbacks. His economy ax fell heaviest on the budgets for higher education and the state Department of Mental Hygiene.

U.C. TRIMMED

The governor lopped $5.9 million from the legislature's budget for the programs at the University of California and another $7 million earmarked for faculty pay raises at UC. The UC budget ended up at $250 million— almost exactly what Reagan proposed and $14 million less than the Board of Regents said the university needs.

The state colleges' budget fell $3.4 million for programs and $11 million for faculty pay boosts, bringing state support to $187 million— just slightly higher than Reagan's revised request.

MENTAL CUTS

The governor slashed $11.6 million off the legislature's version of the budget for the Department of Mental Hygiene, cutting it back to his original proposal which called for elimination of 3,700 jobs. He also chopped off $5.7 million earmarked for pay increases for nurses and psychiatric technicians.

Education Staff Cut Protested

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The vice president of the state Board of Education charged today Gov. Ronald Reagan cut the heart out of the board by vetoing the appropriation to pay for its staff.

"I am angry," said Milton Schwartz, a Sacramento attorney. "This has a devastating effect on the board. We can't operate this way. There is nothing left."

Reagan "blue penciled" from the state budget money to pay the salaries of Newton Chase, a special consultant, Jerry J. Keating, a special representative, and three clerical employees.

BOARD STAFFLESS

That left the board without a staff of its own. It now must depend upon the staff of the Department of Education, headed by Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty.

Chase and Keating were hired four years ago when open warfare broke out between Rafferty and former Board President Thomas Braden.

Schwartz said the board can not operate as more than a figurehead without a staff. He said state law gives the board the task of setting policy for the department to carry out but that job cannot be done effectively if the board must depend upon the department for information.

RAFFERTY HIT

Rafferty lost his chief assistant a day earlier. The legislature eliminated the job of Dr. Everett T. Calvert, a deputy superintendent of public instruction.

Some legislators had planned to try to restore Calvert's job through separate legislation. But the drive appeared to be blunted by Reagan's veto of the board's staff.

Rafferty is a close political ally of the governor. He was known to have asked Reagan to veto the board staff positions.

Inland Marin Pants But Coast Is Cool

Inland Marin continued to swelter yesterday with highs in the 90's reported in several areas. The coast was cooler under an air-conditioning fog.

The forecast is for more of the same over the holiday weekend — continued hot with no break in sight. High reported in Marin yesterday was 94 at Novato.

FIRE RUINS TWO HOMES IN FAIRFAX

Confusion Rife Over Location; $22,000 Damage

Fire of unknown cause destroyed two Fairfax houses last night in a spectacular $22,000 blaze that lit the sky for miles about Marin.

The flames, seen as far as Richmond, caused such a rash of calls, starting at 8:40 p.m., that it was difficult for Fireman Thomas Kline to determine an exact location. Those calling in could not give a street address for the blaze. In her excitement, one woman reported the fire to San Rafael firemen.

THREE HOMES HIT

Destroyed were a $7,000 home belonging to Edward Meany at 194 Tamalpais Avenue and a $13,000 home belonging to Ceidel Harden at 192 Tamalpais Avenue. In addition there was $2,000 smoke damage done to a structure owned by Donald Erdesky at 196 Tamalpais Avenue.

The estimates were made today by Fairfax Fire Chief Charles M. Thornton. He said cause of the spectacular blaze was still under investigation.

It was believed that the fire started in the Harden home. Meany and Harden, who had both been living here, were away at the time of the fire, firemen reported.

DISPATCH DELAYED

Kline said it was 15 minutes before he had a definite address and was able to dispatch fire engines.

Mrs. Barbara Ravani of 176 Tamalpais Avenue said today that she heard an explosion at 8:30 p.m. and rushed to her window to see a wide expanse of smoke and flame. In her excitement, she called the San Rafael Fire Department.

Neighbors said Meany was in the process of remodeling the "eyesore" at 194 Tamalpais Avenue and that it was surrounded by dry brush and trees.

Independent-Journal delivery boy Hadi Saadoon, said Meany,

First-Nighters Throng Marin Garden Fair

Opening night visitors yesterday stepped through a gold-carpeted archway into the world of the Spanish missions at the Marin Art and Garden Fair.

Paid attendance was 1,761, down slightly from last year, but no count was taken of non-paying guests and children who entered free.

(Results of first night judging are on Page 7.)

Fairgoers tonight at the "Fiesta de Verano" will be entertained at 7:30 p.m. with folk dancing by the Marin Dance Council, and at 8:30 p.m. by Lola Montes and her Spanish dancers. Both events are at the amphitheater.

Other events today include performances by Eddie the Clown at 4:30 and 6:30 p.m., a ballroom dance exhibition at 5 p.m. and an organ concert at 7 p.m.

Tomorrow's highlight will be the Marin Civic Ballet, directed by Leona Norman, at 8:30 p.m. at the amphitheater.

Strolling guitarists will play from 4 to 7 p.m. today and tomorrow.

Other entertainment tomorrow includes Eddie the Clown at 11:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., a period fashion show at 3 p.m., ballroom dance exhibition at 5 p.m. and an organ concert at 7 p.m.

Top winners in garden judging were West End Nursery, San Rafael, best over-all excellence; Cottage Construction Co., Vallejo, best construction; Dolinsek Begonia Gardens, Cotati, best plant material; Marin Orchid Society, best over-all excellence in amateur model gardens; Mrs. William Gaumer, Richmond, best in show first period flower arrangement.

Assessor Ups Marin Values 11.4 Per Cent; Farms Hit

By DAVID DIETZ

Marin's assessed valuation total — pending tax appeals and late corrections — was placed yesterday at $499.6 million, up 11.4 per cent over the fiscal year just ended.

The increase is due to a vast reassessment of properties this calendar year to bring them up to market standards, said Asst. Assessor Herschel W. Johnson.

Auditor - Controller Michael Mitchell said the figure is so close to the estimate he was given earlier in the week that it will not change the current estimated county tax rate of $2.337 per $100 of assessed valuation for this fiscal year, which began today. Last year's tax rate was $2.295.

The new rate was reported when the board of supervisors adopted the $28.6 million county budget Tuesday.

Mitchell estimated total assessed valuation at $532.3 million, up 10.4 per cent over last year. This includes an estimate of $32.7 million on the assessment of public utility lands and property in Marin. That final figure will be submitted in August by the State Board of Equalization.

The actual tax rate will be determined by that figure and any surplus from the 1966-1967 fiscal budget, Mitchell said.

Yesterday's figures showed assessment increase of as much as 41 per cent within the boundaries of the county's 24 school districts, 11 municipalities and unincorporated area.

FARMERS HIT

The biggest boosts came in rural areas. Farm properties increased 30.5 per cent in assessed value over last year. The total assessment in the Marin County portion of Laguna Joint Elementary School District rose 41 per cent, with a 38.2 per cent jump in the West Marin Union School District.

Among cities, highest were Novato, 24.8 per cent, and Corte Madera, 16.7 per cent. Unincorporated area assessment increased 12.1 per cent.

The school district figures:

Bolinas-Stinson Union, $9.2 million, up 25.3 per cent; Dixie, $41.8 million, up 13.6 per cent; Fairfax, $16 million, up 1.8 per cent; Kentfield, $32.5 million, up 2.8 per cent; Lagunitas, $5.9 million, up 1.6 per cent; Larkspur, $31 million, up 21.3 per cent; Mill Valley, $59.1 million, up 6.6 per cent.

NICASIO UP

Also Nicasio, $2.3 million, up 22.1 per cent; Point Reyes, $478,000, unchanged; Reed Union, $40.5 million, up 4.3 per cent; Ross, $10.5 million, up 1.3 per cent; San Anselmo, $32.5 million, up 2.2 per cent; San Rafael Elementary, $102 million, up 13 per cent; Sausalito, $28.5 million, up 8.1 per cent; Tomales Bay Union, $5.2 million, up 23.4 per cent; Union Joint, $367,674, up 21 per cent, and West Marin Union, $10.3 million, up 38.2 per cent.

High school district figures showed: Novato Unified, $67.9 million, up 21.9 per cent; Petaluma Joint (Marin portion), $3.3 million, up 34.6 per cent; San Rafael, $143.8 million, up 13.2 per cent; Tamalpais Joint Un-

Suspect Nabbed Soon After Market Robbery

Tweedie's General Store in Santa Venetia was robbed at 2:30 p.m. yesterday by a masked gunman who got away with an estimated $50.

Two hours later the California Highway Patrol picked up William D. Ayers, 20, of 1713 Lincoln Avenue, Apt. 17, San Rafael, who was taken to the Marin County Sheriff's Department and later booked on a charge of armed robbery.

Ayers was released on $5,500 bail and is scheduled to be arraigned at 1:30 p.m. Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

His arrest was prompted by the description of the robber given sheriff's officers by Mrs. Adam Ecich of 321 North San Pedro Road, Santa Venetia, the clerk at the store. The gunman forced her to empty the cash register for him.

Highway Patrol Officer George L. Steffenson saw Ayers, who matched the description put out on an all-points bulletin by the sheriff's department, walking south on the shoulder of the northbound land of Highway 101 at Puerto Suello Hill.

Steffenson parked at the Lincoln Avenue on-ramp and when Ayers appeared he motioned for the suspect to approach the car. Steffenson radioed for another officer and notified the sheriff's office he had a suspect who matched the all-points description.

Ayers, handcuffed and searched, told the officers, "the gun is here" and pointed under his belt buckle and black sweater, reported Highway Patrol Sgt.

Kosygin Calls For U.N. Move In Mideast

PARIS (UPI) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said today it was up to the United Nations to find a peaceful solution to the Middle East crisis. As for Vietnam, he said only the Vietnamese people themselves can solve their "problems of peace or war."

Kosygin spoke to newsmen following a three-hour meeting with French President Charles de Gaulle and just before boarding his plane for the flight back to Moscow.

The Soviet premier made no specific mention of the roles of the United States or Russia when a newsman asked if his meetings with President Johnson would help settle the Vietnam war.

"I cannot tell you," Kosygin said. "This depends on the Vietnamese people and government. They have to solve their problems of peace or war and not us right here. Only our Vietnamese comrades can solve these problems. They are the

PILL Vs. STORK

Marin Birth Rate Shows Slump Since Advent Of New Controls

By JIM BREWER

Marin County birth rates have declined sharply since the "pill" came into general use in 1965, according to figures on births and population released by two county agencies yesterday.

Statistics from the county health department show the birth rate dropped from 17 per 1,000 in 1965 to 10 per 1,000 in 1966. Birth rates between 1961 and 1965 fluctuated from 16 per 1,000, dropping to 13.5 per 1,000, and climbing again to 17 per 1,000.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, who provided figures on the number of births in recent years, would not give full credit to the "pill." She said the 12 per cent decline since 1966, a decline she called gradual, may be due to all phases of planned parenthood.

Dr. William Langford, vice president of the Marin County Planned Parenthood Association, noted that part of the decline may be because many more mothers than before are going to San Francisco hospitals.

"The pill is an important general factor, although we should not overlook the special conditions that we have here in Marin," he said.

Statistics from Marin General Hospital confirm the decline and reported that it no longer reserves its maternity department for obstetric cases. The 30-bed unit there now also accepts women patients due for general surgery and general ogstetrics.

Figures from the hospital show that maternities declined after 1961 with the largest drop—8 per cent—coming between 1965 and 1966.

The rising population figures furnished by the county planning department when compared with births show that while the citizen count rose 25 per cent since 1961, the number of babies born remained steady until 1965, when it dropped by more than one-third.

Statistics furnished by the two agencies showed the population from 1961 rose steadily from about 150,000 to more than 200,000 while the births were 2,249 in 1961; 2,488 in 1962; 2,340 in 1963; 2,477 in 1964; 3,301 in 1965 and 2,030 in 1966.

Transit Gives Growing Pains To East Bay

OAKLAND (AP) — The East Bay is alive with the growing pains of the $1.2 billion Bay Area Rapid Transit District — still four years from becoming a 75-mile automated reality.

This was apparent yesterday on a tour from a welder's torch under San Francisco Bay to a 4.5-mile test track in Concord where the future of rapid transit is being tested.

The route included boarded-over Broadway, Oakland's main street, turned into a one-way thoroughfare while sandhogs build two three-deck underground stations.

It led past the combined Grove-Shafter Freeway, down the middle of which BART's electric rails will run from Contra Costa County to Oakland and San Francisco.

Taking shape in red girders was the MacArthur Station — at 40th and Grove streets — which will be the terminus of the first 16-mile section of track to be opened to paying traffic. That will run to Hayward in Southern Alameda County. Target date is the fall of 1969.

BART's route ducks off the freeway as it approaches the Oakland hills, to run through the fourth longest vehicular tunnel in the United States. On the Contra Costa County side of the hills, the tunnels are being extended to run under another freeway. One of the more than 115 contractors on the three-county job starts this month widening and realigning the freeway for BART's approach to its Orinda Station.

In Pleasant Hill, under a half mile of the test track, lies a landscaped linear park that so impressed the Department of Housing and Urban Development that it granted Bart $500,000 to develop more parkways in Albany and El Cerrito. BART is trying to encourage cities to take over maintenance of such parks, if it builds them.

At the other end of the East Bay line, welders under San Francisco Bay were cutting out bulkheads at the end of tube section 57. This is the first of a series of waterproof steel and concrete tube sections, built in a San Francisco shipyard and lowered into place from above, that will stretch four miles under San Francisco Bay. Five sections, averaging 330 feet each, have been placed.

Congressmen Visit Port Chicago, May Wipe It Off Bay Area Map

CONCORD (AP)—A Congressional delegation went back to Washington today to deliberate on final recommendations that could determine whether tiny Port Chicago will continue to exist.

The village of 2,190 persons is 4,400 feet from a huge munitions loading facility that supplies 70 per cent of the bombs and other high explosives for Vietnam.

The congressmen conducted a whirlwind inspection yesterday of the Naval Weapons Station at Concord, two miles from Port Chicago, and the piers the Navy fears could wipe it off the map in an explosion.

For 15 years the Navy has periodically tried to acquire Port Chicago and get its residents to move away, creating a two-mile buffer zone around the piers.

After the inspection, congressmen from two subcommittees of the House Armed Services Committee conducted a news conference, at which Rep. William Bray, R-Ind., said:

"Something must be done at last—something will be done."

In 1944, two cargo ships and 3½ million pounds of high explosives blew up at a Port Chicago pier, killing 322 men working the ship. The explosion just about wrecked the town and broke glass 35 miles away.

Rep. Mel Price, D-Ill., chairman of the tour subcommittee, said the Navy's request for $20 million to acquire Port Chicago is the last item on the military construction appropriations lineup and the full committee would make a decision by July 10.

Bray, the most forceful speaker in the view that a decision should finally be made, said there were three alternatives—elimination of Port Chicago, relocation of the three piers, and relocation of the facility to Bangord, Wash.

Rep. John McFall, D-Calif., noted that the munitions operation is a $200 million-a-year investment.

The news conference, which was picketed by three sign-toting marchers just outside the hotel, was called by Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif., whose district includes Port Chicago, the spearhead of a drive to keep the Navy from taking over the town.

Waldie declined to guess what the subcommittee would recommend, or what the decision of the full committee would be, but he said he had a feeling "I am not paddling upstream."

Waldie wants the Navy to move the piers away from Port Chicago onto islands on Suisan Bay, but the navy has objected on several grounds including cost and efficiency.

The freshman lawmaker is backed by many Port Chicago residents who argue that they have established homes in the little town 35 miles northeast of San Francisco, and that they aren't afraid of the blast threat.

Collision Hurts One

A Sausalito driver, David Lee Smith, 24, was treated for face and left leg cuts at Marin General Hospital today suffered when his car spun round on the Highway 101 off-ramp to Marin City and was hit by a second car. Driver of the other car, Edgar M. Hooper of San Francisco, was uninjured.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Queen Lauds French

OTTAWA (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth II, who three years ago was jeered by French-Canadian separatists, heaped praise on the French influence in Canadian life today in a centennial address to the nation.

Speaking in French and English from a red velvet throne before the Parliament buildings, the queen said the air of Canada "has been sweetened with the French tongue and French culture and sharpened with French intelligence and French resource."

Radio Moons Aloft

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — A Titan 3C rocket carrying six military satellites left earth today to close the gaps in Pentagon communications to Vietnam and test a new radio link one scientist said may change the way wars are fought.

Four of the Titan's moonlets were radio relay stations joining the network of 15 already in orbit. The satellite system went into full-time operation today, flashing jam-free orders to overseas forces on a routine basis.

Another satellite was ready to try out a new communications system for front line troops and the sixth was designed to grow long, silver "whiskers" in orbit to see how well gravity can stabilize it and a television camera that will beam back unique color pictures of earth.

Buffalo Quieter

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Racial violence that rocked this city for three days subsided early today after a promise of more jobs for Negroes and a good-will visit by gubernatorial aide and former baseball star Jackie Robinson.

Nearly 500 shotgun-carrying policemen withdrew to the perimeters of the mile-square East Side district last night as the disturbance faded and the long Fourth of July weekend began.

Rains Help India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Monsoon rains fell on famine-stricken Bihar State today and farmers began planting rice once again as hopes soared that a three-year drought had ended.

The rains must continue for at least six more weeks if the rice seeds are to blossom into stalks that should produce more than four million tons of badly needed food grains in the state.

Mao's Top Rival Beaten?

TOKYO (AP) — Chairman Mao Tse-tung's leadership claimed today its supporters "have exposed and overthrown" President Liu Shao-chi in the current cultural revolution sweeping Red China.

Liu Shao-chi

The Red Flag, theoretical journal of the Chinese Communst Party, made the claim in its latest issue commemorating the 46th anniversary of the party.

The editorial, broadcast by Peking's official New China News Agency, monitored here, continued to identify Liu, Mao's archrival in the power struggle, as "the top party person in authority taking the capitalist road.

"This is a great victory for Mao Tse-tung's thought, a great victory in building our party under the guidance of Mao Tse-tung's thought," it added.

RANGOON (UPI) — Anti-Chinese rioting similar to the violence that rocked Rangoon earlier this week has spread to other areas of the country, according to reports reaching the capital today.

Leak Kills Fish

NORDEN (UPI) — Thousands of catfish and trout were killed Friday when a Southern Pacific Co. fuel oil tank leaked hundreds of gallons of oil into Lake Spaulding and the South Yuba River.

State fish and game officials said the oil would be "disastrous" to the lake fishery.

Brown Raps Reagan

BEVERLY HILLS (UPI) — Former Gov. Edmund G. Brown has charged that Gov. Reagan's "transparent presidential ambitions could cost California taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars in unnecessary new taxes this year."

Brown yesterday issued a statement before he and his wife left on a world trip.

"He wants the money now to escape a tax increase in 1968 — the presidential nomination and election year," Brown said.

Dam Perils Town

LAWRENCEBURG, Tenn. (AP) — An earthen dam, weakened by more than two inches of near steady rain in recent days, held most of its 3.6 billion gallons of water firm today. But the threat of a torrential flood remained for three small middle Tennessee communities.

The state Game and Fish Commission, which operates the Laurel Hill Dam on the Buffalo River, sought to release some of the pressure on the 840-foot-long dam by swooshing water through an 11½-inch takeoff valve.

$23 Million Debt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has won a $23 million judgment by default against Don Silverthorne, one-time president of the now defunct San Francisco National Bank.

Judge Melvyn I. Cronin made the award yesterday after Silverthorne failed to appear in court.

Friends say the banker, convicted of aiding in the theft of an $8,000 bank loan fee and the misapplication of funds, is now broke and living in Tiburon.

The FDIC contended the $23 million is made up of fees for bank loans that Silverthorne pocketed, an overdraft of $25,000 in his own checking account and almost $22½ million in bad bank loans.

Welfare Protests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Welfare recipients demonstrated yesterday in many major cities around the nation against what they termed inadequate benefits and inferior treatment.

There were no reports of any disorders at the demonstrations, which were being coordinated by the National Welfare Rights Movement (NWRM) with headquarters in Washington.

Podgorny In Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny came to Damascus today to review the Middle East situation with Syria's Socialist leaders.

First Negro Astronaut Appointed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first Negro astronaut called his selection for the Manned Orbiting Laboratory — MOL — program "nothing dramatic."

Maj. Robert H. Lawrence Jr., told newsmen it was "just a natural progression" and that he was fortunate to be chosen for the "nonaggressive, military operation."

Lawrence was one of four more aerospace research pilots named yesterday by the Air Force in the Department of Defense MOL program. They complete a list of 16 pilots, two of whom are scheduled to be aboard a Titan 3C booster sometime in 1970, headed for an orbiting laboratory.

The other three are Lt. Col Robert T. Herres, 34, Denver, Colo.; Maj. Donald H. Peterson, 33, Winona, Miss.; and Maj. James A. Abrahamson, 34, Portland, Ore.

Lawrence, from Chicago, is the youngest of the four at 31 and is the only one with a Ph.D — in physical chemistry from Ohio State University.

Abrahamson has bachelor's and master's degrees in engineering and public administration. Peterson has a master's degree in nuclear engineering.

All four of the new research pilots are married.

Lawrence, asked at a news conference whether he had met any opposition to his appointment because he is a Negro, said he wasn't aware of any.

When Peterson was asked whether he would have any feelings about going up in a two-man capsule with a Negro, the Mississippian replied, smiling:

"No sir, we roomed together last night and didn't have any problems."

Lawrence added, with a laugh, "You proposed we would be the two who would go up together. Well, I'd be quite pleased with that."

Teen-Ager Arrested On Pair Of Charges

Daniel James Hayden, 19, of 77 Buckelew Street, Marin City, was booked into Marin County Jail today on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and resisting arrest.

Sheriff's Lt. Ellis Seibert said Hayden was picked up by officers with a young girl on a hillside overlooking Marin City at about 2:30 a.m. today and resisted arrest.

Jail Inmate Sickens, Dies

For a reason known only to himself, Paul Roland Buckner began to drink heavily about ten years ago.

From then on, he received a notoriety of a sort — among the San Rafael police who picked him up in the street or around the city's bars, and among the jailers who booked him into Marin County Jail 36 times since 1957.

Added to the notoriety were legends he created himself. He told officers he was once a commander in German submarines, and to others he said he worked on the battleship Graf Spee before leaving his native Germany.

Last night, Buckner, 66, was taken ill in Marin County Jail where he was serving a seven-day sentence for being drunk. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Marin General Hospital.

In his pockets, deputies found two cents, an empty wallet and a key to a motel where he was an occasional resident.

His funeral is expected to be without notoriety. Buckner was on welfare and has no known living relatives.

ones who are doing the fighting."

Kosygin did not elaborate on his statement. He spoke in Russian during the news conference in the presidential Elysee Palace and his remarks were translated by his interpreter.

The Soviet premier, making his second stop in Paris in 15 days, said he discussed his talks with Johnson with de Gaulle and reviewed the Arab-Israeli dispute.

"This is surely the task of the United Nations to find a peaceful solution to the Middle East situation," he said.

Kosygin discounted the possibility of a Big Four summit of the Soviet Union, United States, Britain and France. He said one is "not envisaged at this time."

A French newsman asked Kosygin whether his discussions with de Gaulle were devoted only to the Middle East or included other problems.

"We have spoken of the Middle East," Kosygin replied. "We have also spoken of Vietnam. And, you know, when people meet, they speak of everything."

He left a short time later for Moscow aboard his special IL18 turboprop airliner.

Kosygin arrived earlier today from Cuba where he conferred with Premier Fidel Castro. He also had stopped over in Paris to see de Gaulle on his way to New York.

Seven Californians Killed In Hong Kong

HONG KONG (UPI)—At least 15 Americans were among the 24 persons killed when a Thai International Airways jetliner crashed into Kowloon Bay yesterday, the airlines reported today.

The twin-jet Caravelle was carrying 80 persons and crew members when it plunged into the bay while attempting an instrument guided landing at Hong Kong's Kai Tak Airport during a heavy rainstorm.

A huge floating crane raised the wreckage of the plane today.

Most of the passengers were U.S. citizens. Seven of the 15 who died came from California. Nine were women.

The bodies of 21 of the victims were recovered after the shattered fuselage of the twin-engine Caravelle jetliner was lifted from beneath the choppy bay before dawn and moved to a yard near Kai Tak International Airport.

The plane, which had broken into three pieces, was lying in about 40 feet of water. Authorities said 14 bodies were wedged inside the cabin and the others were found in the water.

Divers from the British Royal Navy searched the bay for the bodies of the other three victims.

Fifty-six persons survived the crash and 21 were released from Queen Elizabeth Hospital yesterday after treatment of minor injuries. Hospital officials said the other 35 were in satisfactory condition and some would be released later in the day.

Headquarters of Thai International Airways today released the following list of American passengers killed or missing in the crash:

1. Mrs. Florence S. Olsen, Sacramento.
2. Mr. T. S. Ono, Oakland.
3. Mr. F. F. Ono, Oakland.
4. Miss J. O. Stephens, Oakland, Calif.
5. Mr. R. A. Gustin, San Francisco.
6. Mr. B. W. Darby, Contra Costa County.
7. Mrs. Madeleine J. White, Montebello.
8. Mrs. Mildred Martin, Memphis, Tenn.
9. Mrs. Vivian D. Tepper, Cincinnati, Ohio.
10. Mrs. Josephine Stevenson, no hometown.
11. Mrs. Loretta M. Saunders, no hometown.
12. Miss Baker, no hometown.
13. Mr. C. J. Arasim, returning from Taipei to Wilmington, Del.
14. Mr. Larry L. Fagin, from Taipei (no hometown).
15. Mrs. S. L. Fagin, from Taipei.

BUDGET

officials said the cuts were the largest general fund reductions in state history.

Democratic reaction to the cutbacks was immediate. Assemblyman Robert W. Crown, D-Alameda, chairman of the budget - handling Ways and Means Committee, witnessed the signing ceremony and told Reagan:

"Maybe we'll have something to say when we see what all the cuts are." But it takes a two - thirds majority in both houses to override the governor's budget veto and any effort to do so appeared doomed to failure.

"I'm disheartened," Crown told newsmen afterward. "I'm surprised and startled that the amount was cut out of a budget we considered a tight budget. I just don't see how you can do it."

But Reagan said that despite his cuts "the budget is still higher than it should be and I think we can make economies during the next year that will reduce actual spending by many millions of dollars.

"Certainly we are going to try.

"I just want to say that this administration came in on an economy platform. And we do not take the promises we made lightly."

He said the budget he signed still "generally reflects the program of the administration that preceded us. We intend to keep trying to cut state expenses and to reduce the cost of government until we have exhausted every possibility.

"This year is only the beginning."

Quentin Inmate Stabbed Twice In Yard Fracas

A 26-year-old San Quentin inmate was stabbed twice in the chest with a prison-made knife today during a fight with other prisoners in the upper yard, officials reported.

Narcotics offender Jeffery L. Porter of Los Angeles County, was being treated in the prison hospital today following the attack, broken up when a correctional officer fired a warning shot, according to Lewis A. Fudge, duty officer.

He said a short time after the 9:10 a.m. fight officers found what was apparently the weapon in a trash barrel in the upper yard.

It was a handmade knife from a piece of metal and had a handle of black masking tape.

Porter has a history of discipline problems, said Fudge, and had previously been in solitary confinement. He had been at San Quentin since May 27 and was serving a five-year-to-life sentence for selling narcotics.

Guilty Plea Entered On Check Charge

Gerald Tomsen, 32, of San Francisco, pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to an amended misdemeanor compiaint of passing a worthless $35.95 check Oct. 7 with intent to defraud Macy's in San Rafael.

He originally was accused of passing a felony check. Judge Peter Allen Smith set sentence on the lesser count for 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Out Of Hospital

William L. McCormick, 39, of 1 Phoenix Road, Kentfield, was released yesterday from Marin General Hospital, here he had been under treatment for injuries suffered in an auto accident Tuesday in Larkspur.

James C. Dukes.

Officer Steffenson then removed a Colt .32 automatic pistol with seven rounds in the clip.

The store, located at 290 North San Pedro Road, is owned by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Tweedie of the same address. Mrs. Tweedie estimated the loss at "between $50 and $60." Sheriff's Inspector Guido V. Battaglia said "approximately $50 to $50" was found on Ayers.

Mrs. Ecich said the robbery occurred when she took some bottles through the back door of the store and put them down in a case. No one else was in the store and when she turned around, the gunman "was leaning against a wall. He said, 'This is a hold-up' and he had a gun pointed at me. I stared at him to see if it was a real gun, and he backed me into the store.

"I delayed as long as I could, hoping someone would come into the store, but no one did. He kept yelling at me, 'You're so slow — move!' So I moved."

The gunman, wearing a mask on his face which Mrs. Ecich said was probably women's hosiery, followed her to the cash register. While she was giving him the money, a 13-year-old girl walked into the store and he waved the gun at her menacingly.

Then a truck rolled up to the store. "When he heard the truck," said Mrs. Ecich, "he ran out the back door. Then I called Mrs. Tweedie."

Searchers Fail To Find Youth

Placer County authorities have called off a search for Gregory Vincenti, 17, of San Rafael, who was swept away and presumably drowned Thursday in the American River near Auburn.

Vincenti, the son of Mrs. Fred Vincenti of 1089 Lea Drive, was wading with two companions, Bernard J. Noel and Dill G. Wooley, when he was knocked down by the swift current and disappeared. The three were setting up a weekend camp for their families, who were to arrive later, according to the Placer County sheriff's department.

A search party which included a crew of prison inmates combed the river and both banks without finding the boy.

Mill Valley Auto Looted Of Stereo

Albert Kress of 71 Altamont Avenue, Mill Valley, told Mill Valley police today that a stereo tape deck and four tapes were taken from his auto during the night while it was parked in front of his home.

Police estimated the loss at $100. Kress said he discovered it at 7 a.m.

Four Sought For Border Killings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two men accused of slaying two Southern California border patrolmen are the most recent addition to the FBI's "10 most wanted men" list.

Put on the list yesterday were Florencio Lopez Mationg, 33, and Victor Jerald Bono, 26, described by the FBI as "heavily armed and extremely dangerous narcotics peddlers."

Mationg and Bono and two other men — Alfred Arthur Montoya and his brother, Harold Otto Montoya — are charged in federal warrants with killing two border patrol officers. The slain men were found in a cabin in Anza, Riverside County, two weeks ago.

Searched three days ago by agents, Bono's Perris, Riverside County, home yielded marijuana worth $150,000 and an arsenal that included three submachine guns, bayonets and a machete among more conventional weapons, the FBI said.

Span-Hanging Act Halted By Officers

A 22-year-old actor from Berkeley made the scene too realistic to suit California Highway Patrol Officer Milton Green on the Golden Gate Bridge at 4:45 p.m. yesterday.

Green found Michael M. Amore leaning far out from a catwalk beneath the east railing of the bridge at mid-span, all for the benefit of Joseph Richard Green, a motion picture cameraman, who gave no address.

"It is a miracle that these actors were not blown off the bridge to their death," Green said in his report.

Donald William Serveris of "Family Films," Berkeley, Joseph David Hills and Cameraman Green, were advised against "further idiotic behavior," the officer said. Amore was taken to San Francisco County Jail and booked for violation of state law banning trespass on bridge structures.

Officer Green said the group claimed to be making a film in which one of the characters leaps to his death from the bridge.

Jets Revisit Haiphong Oil Installations

SAIGON (UPI) — American jets divebombed oil storage plants near the port city of Haiphong for the second straight day, U.S. spokesmen reported today. Heavy ground fire brought down two Navy planes and both pilots were listed as missing.

The raids yesterday followed by only a few hours a Soviet charge that U.S. planes Thursday shot up a Russian ship in Haiphong harbor. The Defense Department in Washington conceded the ship may have received hits during attacks on antiaircraft positions. A Communist East German report said four ships, including a Red Chinese, were hit.

The Haiphong attacks were among 115 strike and reconnaissance missions over North Vietnam yesterday.

In other raids yesterday, Air Force pilots flying out of Thailand struck a Surface to Air Missile (SAM) site 60 miles northwest of Hanoi. Spokesmen said the attack touched off two explosions and a broiling cloud of black smoke. Jets also struck road and rail routes.

Along the border between the two Vietnams, U.S. B52 bombers blasted mountain fortresses, storage areas and infiltration routes used by North Vietnamese forces, military spokesmen said.

On the ground, American Marines battled North Vietnamese troops near the Leathernecks' Con Thieu border post for the second straight day.

Spokesmen said eight Communists and four Marines were killed during nine hours of sporadic fighting with a Communist force of unknown size.

Twelve Marines were wounded.

About 40 miles south of the border, near Phu Bai, Communist gunners shot down a Marine helicopter yesterday. Five men were killed, seven injured.

Mother, Child Ejected From Careening Car

A Novato mother and her year-old daughter were in Novato General Hospital today after a narrow brush with death this morning when they were thrown from their car on San Marin Drive.

Novato Police Officer Marvin G. Lesky reported that Mrs. Diane Camicia, 27, of 168 San Felipe Way, Novato, was eastbound at 8:30 a.m. when she lost control of her car while trying to quiet her daughter, Michelle.

The small foreign car flipped on its left side, for 100 feet, hit a curb, flipped about eight feet into the air, throwing out both mother and daughter, flew over them, landing right side up in a field about 20 feet from the road.

Ron Roberts of 35 San Joaquin Place, Novato, who witnessed the accident, said the auto came within five feet of striking the victims. The baby was held for observation with minor cuts and bruises. The mother was in fair condition with a fracture of the lower back.

Officer Lesky said the car had seat belts, but they were not being used.

Marinwood Budget Decision Postponed

Marinwood Community Services District went through its proposed $142,000 budget for fiscal 1967-68 item by item Thursday but postponed any decision on what should live or fall by the wayside until the July 20 meeting.

Chairman Guy E. Baty said yesterday cuts are expected to be made. "These are likely to be in the capital works and parks and recreation programs but nothing final has yet been decided," he said.

OBITUARIES

Mrs. Lorna W. Sharpe Dies At 52

Private funeral for Lorna W. Sharpe, 52, wife of songwriter John Rufus Sharps III of Mill Valley, was held at Russell and Gooch Funeral Chapel, Mill Valley.

Mrs. Sharpe, of 178 Molino Avenue, died Wednesday at a local hospital after a long illness. Her husband's best-known song is "So Rare," a hit in 1937 and again when it was revived in 1957.

Mrs. Sharpe worked in the classified department of the Marin Journal before it became part of the San Rafael Independent-Journal. She was an active campaign worker for Eisenhower in the 1952 and 1956 campaigns in Mill Valley.

A native of North Dakota, she grew up in Seattle, Wash., and moved to California during World War II. She and her husband had lived at the Molino Avenue address since 1947.

She is survived by her husband, her mother, Mrs. Bessie Parkman of Twenty-nine Palms, San Bernardino County; two brothers, John Keilty of San Anselmo and George Kielty of Long Island, N.Y.; and five sisters, Sylvia Parkman Doyle of Belvedere, Rae Ward Keller of Tiburon, Colleen Workman of Omaha, Neb., Donna Case of Alaska, and Annabelle Hagen of Alhambra.

NINA HARRISON

Services were held in Walnut Creek yesterday for Nina Harrison, 77, mother of Gordan Adams Harrison of Mill Valley.

Mrs. Harrison died Wednesday in a local hospital after a long illness. She was a native of Chehalis, Wash., and lived in Seattle many years. Her father, Martin Luther Adams, practiced medicine in Seattle many years.

Mrs. Harrison was a member of La Boheme Musical Club of Seattle. She and her husband, Dr. Jacob S. Harrison, moved to Walnut Creek a year ago.

In addition to her husband and son, she is survived by two grandsons.

FRANK HECHT

Services will be held Monday for Frank J. Hecht of 582 Tarragon Drive, San Rafael, an eight-year resident of Marin County, who died in a local hospital Thursday after a long illness. He was 76 years old.

Hecht was a native of New York and a veteran of World War I. He came to California 57 years ago, operated the Hecht Radio and Television Repair in Inglewood for 25 years and retired some 20 years ago.

His wife, Bertha A. Hecht, died in 1960.

He is survived by two sons, Eugene Hecht of Mill Valley and Frank J. Hecht Jr. of Garden Grove, Los Angeles County; two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Lyons of San Rafael and Anna Hecht of Glendora, Los Angeles County, seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Harry Williams Mortuary, San Rafael.

RUDOLF E. VOGEL

Funeral services were held in San Francisco today for Rudolf E. Vogel, 74, of San Francisco, father of Harald R. Vogel of San Rafael. He died in a San Francisco hospital Thursday after a brief illness.

Vogel, a native of Germany, worked for several years as business manager for a brewery. He came to the United States 12 years ago after retirement.

In addition to his son, he is survived by his wife, Wilhelmina, of San Francisco, and a daughter, Carola Youmans of Hollywood.

Services were conducted at the ary, 1965 Market Street. Private inurnment will be Monday at Mount Olivet Cemetery, Colma.

Wedding Just Bores 'Groom'

OAKLEY, England (UPI)—After being asked repeatedly by her pupils what weddings were like, Mrs. Shirley Whitehouse, operator of a nursery school, arranged a white formal wedding ceremony, choosing Simon Hunt, 4, as the bridegroom and Joanne Gray, 4, as the bride.

Joanne wore white, carried a bouquet and had classmates as bridesmaids. Simon wore his Sunday short trousered suit and white socks. Afterward:

"I loved it," said Joanne.

"I didn't," said Simon.

Flower Courses To Open At Center

Two classes in flower arranging, one for beginners and one for intermediate students, will be given by Mrs. Sarah Tuckey beginning July 11, for six weeks at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

The intermediate classes will be held Tuesday from 10 to noon. The beginning instruction will be from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The first beginners class will cover the fundamentals of flower arranging, with a demonstration and a second period assignment. The intermediate session will include a lecture, demonstration and assignment on more advanced material.

Reservations may be made by calling the Octagon House, at the center.

Linda Anne Smith Betrothed To Michael James Cleland

The engagement of Linda Anne Smith and Michael James Cleland has been announced by the bride's mother, Mrs. Jack M. Smith of Mill Valley.

Tint Your White Hem Lace To Match The Fabric Color

By EUNICE FARMER

So many of you have written to tell me how delighted you were about my suggestion of using narrow lace at the hem of your dresses instead of seam tape. It does give a custom touch to your garment and costs very little more than ordinary hem tape.

If you desire a colored lace and can't find the color you need, place a small amount of cold water dye in a glass jar, mix thoroughly and dip the white lace into the tint. If you need a deeper shade, just add more of the dye. I's so simple to do and can actually be used for any type of trim.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

When machine stitching facings to collars, which side should be face up on the machine?

MRS. W. A. B

DEAR MRS. W. A. B.:

I always advise my students not to try to attach the facing and the collar in one operation. First, pin the collar on your garment, be sure it is even, and then stitch it to the garment from the collar side.

Next, pin the facing on top of the collar, right sides together, and stitch from the wrong side of your garment where you will be able to use the first stitching as your guide to this second stitching. It may take a few minutes longer this way, but you will be sure it is accurate every time.

Don't forget to clip the neckline to the stitching line. This is just as important when there is a collar as without. This will release the neckline for a smoother look.

Mrs. Douglas Lappin of Logan, Kan., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestions.

I've always disliked pleated skirts because of the ironing problem, never knowing how deep the pleats should be. Now, when I make a skirt, and after the final pressing, I turn it to the wrong side and with a laundry marking pen, I place a small mark at each pleat on the hemline. The marks remain after washing, and by pressing the pleats lightly on the wrong side, I am sure they will be in the correct position for the final pressing.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I must sew because I cannot get a good fit when I buy clothes. However, I'm having trouble with my skirts. I have a large waist but very small flat hips and the skirts always have a bulge below the darts no matter how much I taper them. Is there a solution to this?

MRS. B. M. S.

DEAR MRS. B. M. S.:

Darts are the real answer to most figure problems. They can be made larger or smaller depending on the individual's need. The deeper the dart, the more shaped the area will become. Try to remember this point when adjusting your own fitting.

In your case, you need more room for your waist and since your hips are very flat, you need less shaping in the darts. I would recommend making the darts no deeper than ¼ inch wide at the waistline. This will give you the extra width you will need at the waist, and because the darts are so small, you won't have a bulge at the pointed end of them. It is usually better to make two small darts, rather that one large one at the back of your skirts.

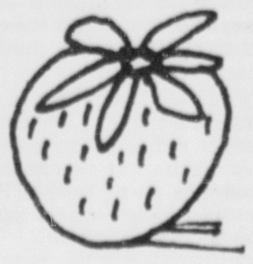
FOURTH FUN

Picnic And Outdoors Type Foods On Plentiful List



WASHINGTON (UPI)—This first-of-July-weekend boasts a host of foods in ample supply—many good morsels for picnics and outdoor cooking.

For instance, steaks and ground beef—great from the grill as charcoal-broiled hamburgers—are plentiful in local markets this weekend. Along with steaks and ground beef are spareribs, ham, broiler-fryers and turkeys finding their way to market in abundance.

YOU MAY find cabbage and carrots, for cole slaw and crisp carrot sticks, in good supply in your favorite vegetable bin this weekend. These two colorful, vitamin-rich vegetables are joined by two more in abundance: onions—always a taste picker-upper, and potatoes—for your home-fries or potato salad.

In the fruit department there is an array of traditional picnic treats, such as watermelons and strawberries, plus some areas' cantaloups, oranges and peaches.

IN THE WEST:

Pork prices trended downward in most West Coast markets: loins, hams, and bacon declined 2 to 3 cents in San Francisco and Los Angeles, spareribs and Boston butts declined 1 cent in San Francisco, and shoulders 1 to 2 cents in Southern California.

Among choice steer beef cuts, loins advanced slightly in the Northwest, but dropped 2 cents in Los Angeles. Beef ribs advanced 2 cents a pound in California markets.

Lamb prices are from 1 to 4 cents lower in West Coast markets, while the ample supplies of dairy and poultry items are unchanged in price.

FRUITS and vegetables in best supply are apples, bananas, grapes, grapefruit, oranges, peaches, strawberries, cabbage, carrots, onions and potatoes.

In the West, good fish buys include halibut steaks, canned salmon, flounder fillets, Pacific ocean perch fillets, rockfish fillets, and cod fillets.

Ross Bardwell Claims Bride In Laguna Beach Ceremony

The Neighborhood Congregational Church at Laguna Beach was the setting for the wedding of Nancy Peterson of Quincy and Ross L. Bardwell of Sausalito on Friday, June 16.

Nancy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Peterson of Quincy, wore a candlelight satin and lace floor length gown with chapel train and lace mantilla. Her sister, Karen, of Berkeley, was her maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Stephanie Crilly of Newport Beach, Judith Currie of Berkeley, Judith Grover of Quincy and Carol Hartoonian of Beverly Hills. The attendants all wore matching full length dresses of Dresden blue dotted Swiss organza.

The bridegroom, the son of Mrs. Judson E. Bardwell and the late Judson Bardwell of Sausalito, was attended by Ronald Johnston of Long Beach as best man. Ushers were Pardee Bardwell, Conrad Breece of Sausalito, William Johnston of Goleta and Dale Peterson of Quincy.

Following a wedding trip to San Francisco, the couple are residing in Goleta.

The bride is a senior at the University of California in Santa Barbara and will continue her studies in the fall, where she will be graduated in December. She is the sister of Karen and Dale Peterson.

Ross was graduated from the University of California at Santa Barbara and is a member of Sigma Pi fraternity. He will resumes his studies in the fall working towards his master degree in history and will also be a teaching assistant. Jay and Pardee Bardwell of Sausalito are his brothers.

JAYNE MANSFIELD

Pennsylvania Rites For Jayne Mansfield

PEN ARGYL, Pa. (AP)—Jayne Mansfield, the glamorous movie star who became world-renowned as a sex symbol, will be buried Monday in this small eastern Pennsylvania town, where she lived as a little girl, it was disclosed today.

A spokesman for the Pullis Funeral Home here said Miss Mansfield's body was flown today from New Orleans, La.—where she was killed in an auto crash Thursday — to Newark, N.J. Attendants brought it by hearse the remaining 65 miles.

Undertaker Clyde A. Pullis said services will be "strictly private" at 2 p.m. EDT with burial in Fairview Cemetery, near the grave of her father, Edward Palmer, who was a lawyer in nearby Philipsburg, N.J.

Announcement of the funeral arrangements were made in New Orleans by Jerry Weber, lawyer for Miss Mansfield's second husband, Mickey Hargitay.

Weber represented muscleman Mickey Hargitay at a hearing yesterday in which Criminal Dist. Court Judge Bernard J. Bagert ruled that Hargetay was still married to the 34-year-old Hollywood sex symbol when she and two men were killed Thursday in an auto-truck collision.

The judge ruled that Miss Mansfield's marriage to her third husband, Matt Cimber, father of her two-year-old son Antonio, was invalid because her Mexican divorce from Hargitay was invalid.

Miss Mansfield was killed only days after completing a film under Cimber's direction, "Single Room, Furnished." She played a starring role as a bruette.

Ironically, the film ends with an auto crash.

The body of Samuel S. Brody, 48, lawyer killed in Thursday's crash, was sent to Los Angeles. It was claimed by Beverly Brody, who had sued him for divorce and named Miss Mansfield as correspondent.

Funeral services for Ronald B. Harrison, 20, a student from Mississippi City, Miss., who was driving the car, were scheduled today in Gulfport, Miss.

Tiny Tot Rec Programs Opens In San Rafael

A new Tiny Tot summer program for children from three to five was started by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation this week including arts and crafts, games, story-telling, parties and field trips.

The program will continue through the week of Aug. 14, and each youth attends one class a week for two hours.

Locations are: Albert Park, Monday or Wednesday, Glenwood School, Tuesday or Thursday; John MacPhail School, Monday or Wednesday, and Nova Albion School, Tuesday or Thursdays. The hours open are either 10 a.m. to noon or 1 to 3 p.m. at these locations.

Late registration will be taken next Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, reported Ronald Koller, recreation supervisor.

Attack Launched On Valley Litter

Explorer Scouts and members of the San Geronimo Valley Lions Club has launched an all out attack on litter in their valley.

In May, litter cans, clearly marked with signs, were placed at strategic spots along Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. This month, the Scouts and Lions will distribute litter bags for merchants in the valley to pass out.

Scouts participating were from Posts 76, 15, 34 and 63.

John Strahm of Woodacre, chairman of the Lions anti-litter committee, said that the idea of the campaign is to keep the problem before the public with a new campaign each month.

The name Alaska is taken from Alayeska, an Aleut word meaning "the great land."

Landscape Architect Honored For Design

Michael Painter, landscape architect of Mill Valley has received an honor award from the American Society of Landscape Architects for his landscape and site design of the General Electric Atomic Power Equipment Department headquarters in San Jose.

Painter, of 7 Dawn Place, is a partner in the firm of John Carl Warnecke and Associates in San Francisco. He was commended recently by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson for his landscape design of the College of San Mateo.

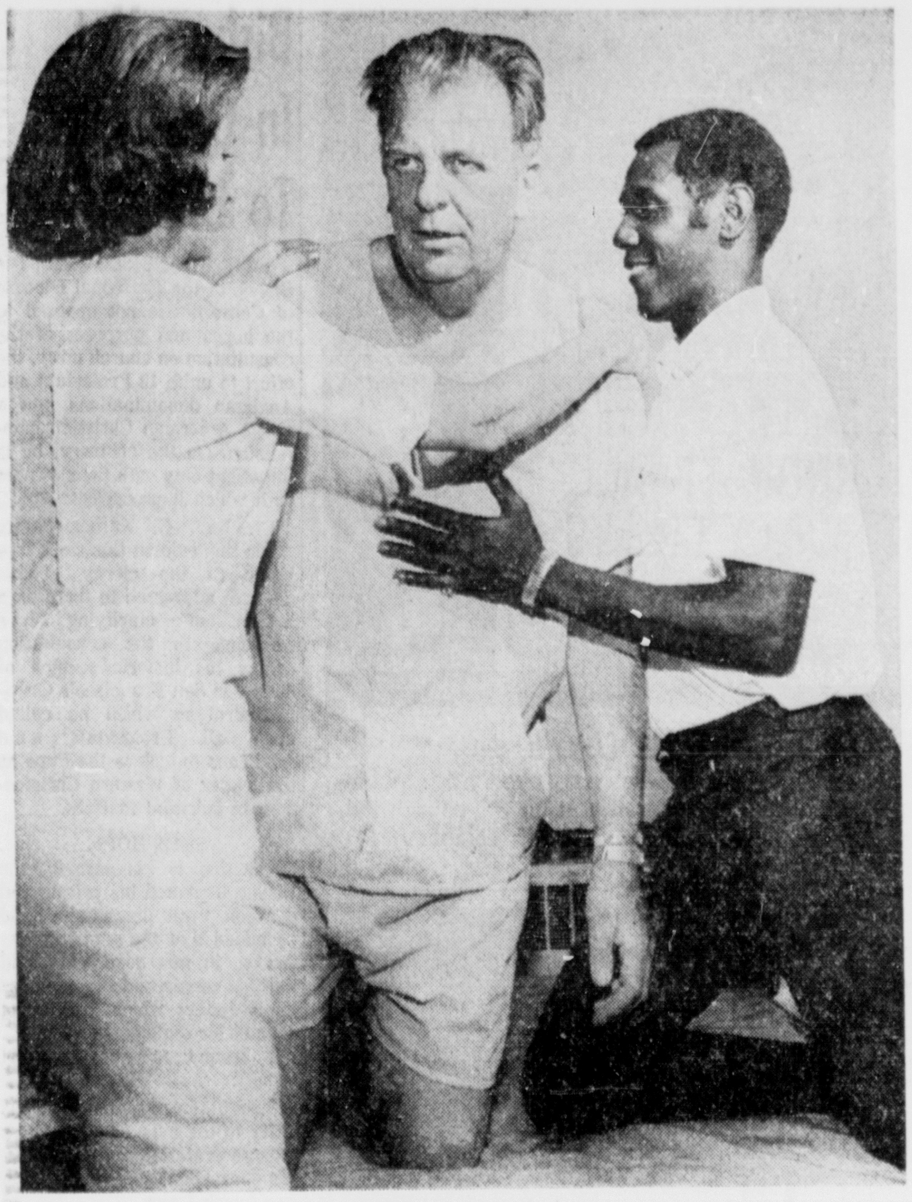
Trainees Glad Of A Chance

By BRUCE COLEMAN



HELPING HANDS—Physical Therapist Jean Blom and aide Willie Grayson are "rough-but-gentle" in seeing that stroke patient E. A. Christern gets the exercise that will help him along the road to recovery.

A day in the work life of Willie Grayson of Marin City goes something like this:

"I start work at 8:30 a.m. I fill the Hubbard tank with water and get ready, with another aide, for the first therapy patient. I work with patients on the mat, standing by to see that the patient doesn't suddenly fall on one side. Then I turn on the paraffin bath and help patients at the parallel bars.

"I make minor repairs to equipment such as the wheel chairs. I eat lunch at noon in the cafeteria. In the afternoon, it is usually the same kind of routine. I'm off work at 5.

Willie Grayson, 21, is a physical therapy aide at Marin General Hospital under the Bay Area Uurban League on-the-job training program.

He is one of two trainees in the new program at the hospital. The other is Donna Thomas, 32, of San Rafael.

For Willie, this is a big opportunity to go into a profession. Prior to this he has held temporary jobs, including truck driving.

For Donna, this is a chance to upgrade herself in her field. She has been a licensed vocational nurse for 10 years.

How do the trainees feel about the program? Grayson, married and father of a 5-month-old son, has been working two weeks while Miss Thomas, though in the special program two weeks too, has been doing this type of work for two months.

"I think it is a good opportunity because I'm learning an awful lot," says Grayson. "It's a whole different way of life. I've never done this type of work before."

"I feel it is a good program for the simple reason I will beter myself," Miss Thomas said. "It's to beeter both of us as far as knowledge is concerned and help us to cope with a patient, both from the standpoint of his personality and from an efficiency approach."

The trainees play a rough-but-gentle role in that they must be physically strong to push,"gait" and catch patients, yet be sensitive to the patient's pain so as not to hurt him while he is exercising.

A prime example is Grayson's number one patient for the past two weeks — E. A. Christern of San Rafael, who suffered a stroke three weeks ago and is now about ready to go home.

"We push and shove him back and forth to teach him to retain his balance," Miss Thomas related.

On his knees on the mat, the tall 234-pound Christern demonstrated use of aides by falling forward suddenly, half against Grayson.

"I have lived a full, fruitful life and paid my taxes and I was struck down," he said. "We need people like Grayson who can give us back our equilibrium. I mean this — in both senses — that give us back our strength, that we can walk and again do things we did for 50 years. If Willie isn't here, I'm sitting on my duff because I have got to have something to catch me as I fall over."

Christern says an aide "has to think, must be someone you have faith in when we go down stairs. If I have a high fall, I'm a dead duck."

Suzanne Sampson, chief physical therapist, explained that the aides do not give treatment but assist and observe. When training is completed Miss Thomas will concentrate on paper work and do some assisting of patients while Grayson will concentrate on assisting patients. Each, in their contract, are assured of continued jobs when training is over.

One duty of an aide is to "gait" or walk patients. This is often done with the aide holding onto a belt around the patient's middle.

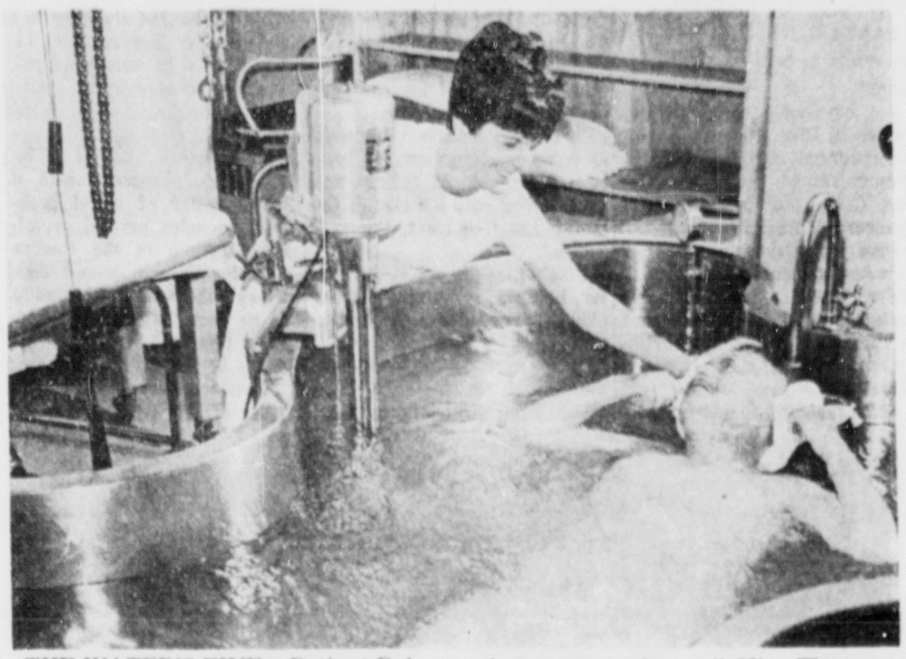
"What a day we had today," said Miss Thomas. "One of the therapists was getting a patient in the parallel bars and, I don't know what happened, we think she started to faint and Willie and I had to take her back to her room."

"Then we were crutch-walking a boy and he felt dizzy. A therapist had us place him in a wheel chair . . . It's not dull. It's different every day. Each patient is different," Miss Thomas added, "And it is a challenge to see the patients get better."

The league, with use of a $600,000 federal grant, seeks jobs for persons who have trouble competing on the job market. Salaries are paid by the hospital, the league providing up to $40 a week for trainee's training costs. W. Robert Lomax Jr., who heads the Marin program for the league, has his office at 1607 McAllister Street, San Francisco.

There is one other on-the-job trainee in the county who is working in Mill Valley. Negotiations are in process for on-the-job training contracts for medical and dental assistants, X-ray technicians and for the job of animal groomer, the latter to be made available in Novato, Lomax said.

"The problem is not to get the trainees," he added, "but to get the facility of industry or employer who will give such training. I hope we can get at least 100 slots filled by October," Lomax said. He also emphasized diversity of jobs, saying training can be done in any business or industry where training is of use of where the job necessitates training or knowledge.



THE WATER'S FINE—Patient Robert Heyman, whose back troubles him, tells Donna Thomas that this is "like flying through the air with the greatest of ease." Miss Thomas is a physical therapy aide receiving on-the-job training at Marin General Hospital. The 100-degree water in the tank is agitated by air blowers. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

Wife's Body Found In Car

Janet Simon Griesbach, 34, wife of Dr. Walter A. Griesbach of San Rafael, was found dead last night with a gunshot wound in the head, apparently self-inflicted, assistant county coroner Eugene R. Fontaine said today.

Her body was found at 8:05 p.m. in the driver's seat of her station wagon parked on San Pedro Road a short distance from China Camp. A .32 caliber revolver was found in her right hand.

Fontaine said no note was found either in the car or at the family home at 18 Anchorage Court, San Rafael.

Mrs. Griesbach had been receiving treatment for depression for several years, said Fontaine, and had been in ill health.

She is survived by her husband and a son, Paul, aged 9. An autopsy was ordered today at Harry M. Williams Mortuary.

Marin Celebrants Can Stay Plenty Busy On The Fourth

The Fourth of July used to mean boys lighting firecrackers and men making patriotic speeches, but times have changed, at least in Marin.

Instead of firecrackers, which are strictly illegal, and speeches, Independence Day 1967 will feature formal fireworks displays and great quantities of food.

Biggest of the fireworks displays will be the one at Neil Cummins School in Corte Madera, part of the 15th annual Larkspur-Corte Madera Twin Cities Festival. It will begin at 9 p.m. and will be visible far and wide.

The festival will include the Larkspur street fair on Magnolia Avenue from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will also be a watermelon feed.

At Marinwood Community Center, the celebration will start with the volunteer firemen's annual pancake breakfast from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. It will continue with games and contests for children and adults, a community swim meet, an ice cream social and watermelon feed.

Sausalito has a fireworks display scheduled for 8:30 p.m., but the wind might interfere. The fireworks will be shot from a barge anchored offshore, according to William Remak of the Sausalito Chamber of Commerce, and if the wind is not blowing across the bay, the danger of firing the anchored boats would force cancellation of the display.

Remak said he fully expects the wind to cooperate and allow him and his crew to "show the kids of Sausalito we love them."

The Hamilton Air Force Base band will be busy on the Fourth. The bandsmen will play in the Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce - Recreation Council parade starting at 11 a.m. in the Safeway parking lot on Miller Avenue and concluding at noon at Lytton Square.

At 6:30 p.m. they will be at Bel Marin Keys to perform before the fireworks display at 9 p.m. sponsored by the developers of the community and the Novato Chamber of Commerce.

The Fourth will be the concluding day of the Marin Art and Garden Fair in Ross.

Only fireworks displays approved by the County Board of Supervisors are legal, according to County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom. He warned that all other fireworks are illegal and violators are subject to fine and imprisonment.

Bad drivers on the holiday are also subject to trouble with the law, and the Patrol reports it will have every available vehicle on duty over the long weekend.

Two Juveniles Face Charges On Marijuana

Two 18-year-old youths were booked into Marin County Jail early today on charges of possession of marijuana and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

But one of them, Larry J. Blackwell of Hilarita Housing Tiburon, may be "a victim of circumstances," sheriff's deputies said today.

Blackwell told Deputy John Goff he was hitchhiking a ride home and was picked up by a car full of youths shortly before the vehicle was stopped at 11:30 p.m. near San Rafael Avenue in Tiburon. Goff pulled the car over when he noticed a cigarette was flipped from a window.

Booked with Blackwell was Dennis D. Moritz of 243 Flamingo Road, Mill Valley. Four juveniles, all from Mill Valley, were booked into Juvenile Hall for possession of marijuana and breach of curfew regulations.

Deputies said they found a plastic bag, believed to contain marijuana, in the car.

Two Bolinas Districts In Swan Songs

The Bolinas and Bolinas Beach public utilities district boards dissolved themselves last night to produce the Bolinas Community Public Utility District today.

Both boards met at the Bolinas Mesa Clubhouse, which like the boards changed its name. The building will now be known as the Bolinas Community Public Utility Building, according to new board chairman Jose A. Silva.

The new board will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday to pass an ordinance and resolutions governing operations.

The old boards last night paid final bills and sat for their final photographs.

The merged board will meet at 7:30 p.m. on the second Wednesday each month.

Fairfax Suspect Held On Checks

Charles Eugene Bernero, 38, of Fairfax, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a felony complaint of three counts of possession of checks with intent to defraud.

Judge Hadden W. Roth scheduled plea for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Bernero, of 111 Chester Avenue, allegedly had checks totaling $358.12 which were stolen from Cemcel Corp., Gate 5, Marinship, and intended to defraud the Lucky store in Fairfax and George's Recreation Parlor, San Rafael, on June 16.

He was arrested yesterday by Fairfax and San Rafael police.

Span Board Adopts Budget Up $417,000

UKIAH — A 1967-68 operating budget totaling $3,101,524 was adopted yesterday by directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District.

This is an increase over expenditures for the year just ended of $417,520. Salaries accounted for a major portion of the increase — approximately $250,000.

District President John Nelson announced that E. R. Foley, chief engineer of the State Division of Bay Toll Crossings will appear before the bridge board next Friday afternoon to explain details of his San Francisco - Marin crossing report which was submitted to the State Legislature on Wednesday.

Bridge Director Ben Lerer notified the board that the Bay Area Transportation Study Commission, of which he is a member, will have its preliminary report ready within a month. This is a broader study of area-wide transportation needs. Lerer said he believes it will agree with Foley's conclusions as regards a new San Francisco-Marin crossing.

By a six to two vote the board rejected a $500,000 damage claim filed against the district by a discharged painter, Paul Powell.

Assessment Hit By Bolinas Club

Bolinas Community, Inc., will protest the increased assessed valuation on the Bolinas community building although protest is "a futile action," according to president Thomas J. Barfield.

Barfield said value of the building has been set at $55,500 although "real estate people tell us it wouldn't bring half that amount."

Bolinas Community last night changed time of the Fourth of July parade to 2 p.m., coinciding with low tide so the beach will be available for children's games.

Pike Views New Role

By RALPH DIGHTON

SANTA BARBARA (UP) —"If heaven is no better I won't complain."

So says Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike, one of the most controversial churchmen of the century, about his new life at The Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Pike joined the philanthropically funded center last year in the midst of a furor over his unconventional beliefs that led to the filing of heresy charges by more than 30 officials of his church.

Pike resigned an administrative post in the church (Northern California Diocese) when he came here but retained the title of bishop as an expression of his continuing interest.

"I like my church," Pike said in a recent interview. "I hope it will be able to reform and come along with the rest of the world. But if it can't, I'll go it alone."

Pike's first project at the center, he says, is "a study of the church as a declining institution."

"I'm interested in the role of the church in society," says Pike. "I am personally interested in the church being conserved, but going on the way it is now will not conserve it. The church must become more relevant to contemporary man, more an institution of our changing times."

The center's staff of 24 intellectuals concerned with a broad roster of social problems includes several prominent laymen in the Roman Catholic Church, whose doctrines Pike assails as readily as he does those of the Episcopal Church.

But, he says, he has been made to feel completely at ease at the center. After a year of sometimes rough give-and-take in the center's daily discussions he says: "I have no thought of leaving here."

He came at the suggestion of the center's president, educator Robert M. Hutchins, who founded the institution eight years ago.

"I was in a quandary, wondering which way to turn, wondering how best to work for needed social and religious reforms. I was at a turning point, because it seemed I could no longer do this from within the church, especially if tied down with administrative duties.

"Hutchins suggested that I come here, and I have been grateful ever since. If heaven is no better, I won't complain."

The quiet, academic life at the center—which Hutchins described as a university without students—has given Pike time to catch up on his reading, do a bit of thinking about his own and the world's future, and to study ways of bridging the gap between himself and traditional churchmen.

Four times since was was ordained a priest in 1946 groups of Episcopal clergymen have denounced him as a heretic and demanded that he be brought to trial. No formal trial has ever been held, however, possibly because of the controversy it might create in the church.

To many, Pike has been more of a prophet that a heretic, spurring the church to a role of greater meaning in personal life. To others, mainly fundamentalists who believe in the Bible literally, he is a disciple of the devil.

Pike has challenged the doctrine of virgin birth, the doctrine of the trinity and the story of Adam and Eve.

Of the latter, he once wrote: "As to such a 'God' who could so behave, a person reasonably intelligent and ethically sensitive would be forced to be an atheist."

Pike opposes much of his church's dogma because he believes "it keeps honest, thinking people out of the church." But he is basically a Christian, saying of Jesus Christ: "He was a man whose openness was such that in him God broke through totally.

He expressed his aim for the church this way: "Now is the time to renew, while there are still people in the church to renew with . . . The church must speak to and act in the world it it in."

Pike's concern with religion dates back to his childhood, spent in Oklahoma City and later in Hollywood. His widowed mother, a schoolteacher, reared him as a Roman Catholic. He studied for the priesthood at the Jesuits' University of Santa Clara, Calif., then transferred to law school at the University of Southern California.

MESSAGE TO THE GRADUATE

Bishop Not In Opposition To Unity Plan

SAN FRANCISCO — The Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California is not opposed to the hopes and purposes of the consultation on church unity, the effort to unite 10 Protestant and Anglican denominations into a single American Christian communion. On the contrary, he is impatient only with the slowness with which it proceeds.

Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers made this evident this week in a letter to the clergy of his diocese, addressed to them as a means of clarifying his reference to the consultation during his historic sermon of June 4 in San Francisco's Grace Cathedral in which he called upon all Protestants and Anglicans to look to the Pope as the leader of Western Christendom in spiritual matters.

SEES HOPE

Reaction to his sermon, the Bishop informed his priests and deacons, "was immediate," and he added that the sermon "was written in this hope." He said that his correspondence includes many letters which are taking his call for dialogue "seriously . . . around this controversial issue."

Bishop Myers took note in his letter to the considerable misinterpretation given his remarks about the Consultation on Church Union.

"I do not advocate a cessation of the meetings . . . Instead, grow impatient with the slowness with which the Consultation proceeds," he wrote, in part. "Let us pray that the Consultation will not get bogged down in the will of man — the cause of the present disunity — but, rather, that it will open itself to the fresh words of the Spirit who alone may move us men into creative forms of unity."

HEART OF MATTER

He also expressed the prayerful hope that the Consultation will refuse to allow the "canonists" of the various ecclesiastical traditions involved to "stall its holy effort."

"Theses hopes," he said "may be understood in the light of the sermon which the Holy Spirit prompted me to preach. In it I was saying, let us get to the heart of the matter. Let us move toward the central thing that divides us — even by the Pope's own admission — the Pope himself."

Interfaith Network Spurring Equal Jobs

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid some dissent, a spreading interfaith network is using its purchasing power today to spur equal job opportunities for Negroes among American business companies.

And a growing number of companies have pledged cooperation — more than 15,000 of them so far.

"It's the largest program of its kind apart from efforts of the federal government," says its prime organizer, Mathew Ahmann of Chicago.

Called Project Equality, it now has operations going in 11 areas, with official Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish bodies participating in most of them, buying their supplies from companies that pursue approved hiring practices.

The economic stakes are considerable, and the use of such leverage has been questioned by some churchmen.

In the regions and cities already involved, the total purchases by religious groups are estimated at $2 billion annually.

From present indications, planners predict the scope of the program will triple by the end of 1968, with 30 regional projects expected to be under way by then.

This would "pretty much blanket the country," Ahmann said.

He estimated 70,000 to 100,000 businesses that regulary supply goods or services to religious organizations would be involved by that time.

Altogether, religious bodies make up one of the country's biggest customers. The approximately $6 billion received annually in contributions is only part of the income they spend, with a additional unknown total coming from investments.

While the equal job opportunities program has become broadly interdenominational, it was initiated in 1965 by the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice, which still serves as its secretariats.

Ahmann, the conference's executive director, said the project enables the churches to tie their moral message to their spending" and to make their commitment to racial justice mean more than mere talk.

"The response from the business community has been very good," he said, adding that city and state units of the major religious bodies also are widely joining in the program.

However, there has been occasional opposition from some individuals and congregations. Criticism came this week from the Catholic Weekly, Ave Maria, which called the program "coercive."

"It is a direct attempt to force compliance with certain standards of employment practices," it added.

Questioning whether this is "wise in view of the history of church attempts to use military, political and economic power," the editorial adds:

"Patterns indicate pretty clearly that every time churchmen turned to economic, political and military means to achieve their goals, the tools were badly handled."

However, Ahmann and others maintain the project is not coercive.

"We're not in any position to close out businesses," he said. "We are simply giving preferences to those firms that go out of their way to be fair in their employment policies and take affirmative steps to overcome past patterns of discrimination."

DR. HAROLD K. GRAVES
Guest in pulpit

Dr. Graves To Conduct Two Services

Dr. Harold K. Graves, president of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, will conduct services tomorrow at the Tiburon Baptist Church, 445 Greenwood Beach Road.

During the 11 a.m. services the Lord's Supper will be held. At 6 p.m. Dr. Graves will speak on "Indispensable Needs in Today's Church."

BELVEDERE WATERFRONT LOW, LOW PRICE
Located on Belvedere's fabulous West Shore where you can anchor your boat just off shore. Fish have been known to jump out of the water and onto the deck. On the many warm days you can swim or just sip a drink and watch the sun go down behind Mt. Tamalpais. This architect-designed home has a redwood and shingle exterior with 2500 square feet of deck. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, large family room & dining room. Green slate entry, lava stone fireplace. 2-story living room, and a bathroom that is—well, you've got to see it. We believe we can deliver this home at $53,950 + land lease. Cost the owner $64,000 to build four years ago. This is definitely one of the best buys we've seen in years.

HOW FAR CAN YOU TRUST A USED VW?
About as far as you can trust a new one . . .
when it's had our 16-point Safety and Performance Inspection. That's why we can guarantee 100 PER CENT the repair or replacement of all major mechanical parts for 30 DAYS OR 1,000 MILES. Of course, not every used VW gets this inspection. Only VW's sold by authorized dealers like us.

Cholestorol, Heart Disease Debate Rages

ATLANTIC CITY (SS) — New fuel has been added to the fight over whether low-cholesterol, low-saturated-fats diets really are related to the question of heart disease. They are generally believed to be an improvement over saturated fats, but conclusive evidence has been lacking.

A team of doctors, after a $3.5 million, 2.5-year preliminary trial with 2,400 healthy men on normal and experimental diets, reported at the American Medical Association meeting here that:

Diets in which saturated fat and cholesterol-rich foods are replaced with polyunsaturated fats appear to reduce cholesterol in the subjects' bloodstreams.

A full-scale study of between 43,000 and 68,000 men ought to be held to nail down the results, and Congress should be asked for the $50 million it might cost.

The new studies, though preliminary, are considered important enough so that the Food and Drug Administration is considering lifting its ban against labeling and promoting products as "high in polyunsaturated fats."

The question of whether or not polyunsaturated fats of the kind found in some nondairy shortenings, oleomargerine and vegetable oils reduce cholesterol levels in Americans has been boiling for some years.

The shortening and oleo industries once capitalized on it in their competition with the dairy and animal food industry, until the Food and Drug Administration banned the practice in 1966, declaring that calling a product "high in unsaturated fats" implied an unproved health claim and might lead to self-prescribing by patients.

FDA now, however, under pressure from the American Dietetic Association and the AMA, is considering a policy change because of the contention that the level of saturated fat is information that consumers — particularly heart patients — ought to have.

FDA Commissioner James L. Goddard is known to have the new study, and the AMA recommendation on his desk. A decision is expected soon.

The doctors reporting to the American Medical Association meeting here insisted their results were only preliminary and inconclusive, and must be followed up before firm conclusions could be drawn.

Among the results reported from a double-blind study in which nobody knew which group was on the experimental diet and which on the normal American diet, was an 11 per cent reduction in serum cholesterol in the group on the experimental diet.

This diet's major feature was a reduction in foods containing saturated fats and cholesterol, and an increase in intake of polyunsaturated fats. An absolute reduction in fats of all kinds was not involved.

Cholesterol is one — but not the only — body lipid thought to be associated with heart disease. It apparently collects on the walls of the blood vessels, stickening and stiffening them while creating strain on the heart and circulatory system.

The feasibility study was never intended to answer the question of whether low-fat diets would prevent heart attacks, the doctors emphasized. The study was too small.

All you'd lose would be your freedom . . .

Newspapers are familiar things, but extremely dangerous. They're dangerous to any kind of government that operates in secrecy. They're dangerous to corruption in high places. They're dangerous to those who would use public concerns for private ends.

But they don't LOOK dangerous . . .

They appear, as does the Independent-Journal, to be a journal of events. They tell you of Congress, of Viet Nam, of births, health and education, of fashions and business, of politics, a charity drive—a thousand things. Newspapers APPEAR so familiar because you see them every day. And they're written by people who don't look dangerous at all.

But don't be fooled. The news is a lot more than it seems. It arms you with something more powerful than any government, any weapon, any faction. It arms you with the ONE thing which alone can protect your freedoms—the simple act of KNOWING what government is doing, from city hall to national capitol. It puts in your hands the means to correct, to change, to ward off any encroachment on the democratic process.

The I-J is part of this ever-flowing stream if information. Our reporters sit in for you at the inner councils — and make them public. They extend your eyes and ears to any meeting where the public concern is at stake. With pad and pencil they take you across the critical thresholds of knowledge . . . turning acts into the unmistakable fact of print.

This is why newspapers are dangerous things to have around . . . in anything but a free society.

This is why, if you would be free, the press MUST BE FREE to serve and preserve the laws of freedom.

As you read your newspaper, take a second look: Is it really just a journal of events? Or is it perhaps a Bill of Rights, printed daily, affirming even your liberty to read?

CANYON ADVENTURE — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., waves as he and his party begin a wilderness trip down the Colorado River from Lee Ferry, Ariz. The journey, expected to end July 4 at Glen Canyon Dam, began yesterday. (AP Wirephoto)

Kennedy Party Launches Grand Canyon Raft Trip

LEE FERRY, Ariz. (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and his party of 43 friends and family will continue riding the rapids of the Colorado River today after spending the night at Vasey's Paradise.

The group, riding four big rafts, left here yesterday at about noon, three hours later than planned.

As a gesture of patriotism, columnist Art Buchwald led the group in singing "God Bless America" and "America the Beautiful." He was given the honor by singer Andy Williams.

The seven Kennedy children on the trip spent most of the first day throwing water-filled bags at each other.

Some 100 persons were on hand at Lee Ferry to bid the senator farewell, and he signed autographs for many before he boarded his raft.

The group will spend the Fourth of July at Glen Canyon Dam where a barbecue has been planned by a movie company. The film's stars — Gregory Peck, Edward G. Robinson and Omar Sharif — will be on hand.

Kennedy and his party was scheduled originally to ride mules to the top of the Grand Canyon, but it was announced Friday that everyone would be walking.

The climb is about seven miles and the temperature on the bottom is usually 100 degrees or more.

Savio, Wife Sentenced To Bay Jail

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)— Bushy-haired Mario Savio was behind bars today for his role in the 1964 sit-in at the University of California campus.

Savio, fast-talking leader of the Free Speech Movement that rocked the UC campus, appeared in court yesterday to be sentenced to a 120-day jail term.

He received a standing ovation from demonstrators and sympathetic spectators as he entered the crowded courtroom with his wife and 18-month-old son. Friends presented him with a chocolate cake with a hacksaw stuck in the middle.

The brief court proceedings put a symbolic end to the movement that helped to bring about 779 arrests, a liberalization of rules regarding political activities on campus, the early retirement of Chancellor Edward Strong and the firing of University President Clark Kerr.

The defendants' appeal was rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court last month some 30 months after the sit-in at Sproul Hall, which climaxed the Free Speech Movement's fight with the school administration.

Berkeley - Albany Municipal Judge George Brunn has been handing out fines and jail terms since the Supreme Court's action.

Among the 67 demonstrators sentenced yesterday with Savio were his wife, Suzanne, and Mrs. Bettina Aptheker Kurzweil, a self-proclaimed Communist who also was an FSM leader. Both women drew 45-day sentences.

Defense Attorney Richard Buxbaum asked that Mrs. Kurzweil's sentence be suspended because she is pregnant. The judge only smiled and said, "She's not going to have her child in jail."

The crowd hissed the decision loudly.

National Budget Facing New Record For Red Ink

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government began a new fiscal year today with the prospect of compiling the largest "peacetime" budget deficit in the nation's history.

Estimates of the administrative budget red ink for the new fiscal year now range from an official $13.6 billion from Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler to more than $20 billion.

Fiscal 1967 ended at midnight yesterday with a budget deficit of about $11 billion, a federal debt of about $327 billion and a new law raising the permanent debt ceiling to $358 billion effective today.

Vietnam war spending is mainly responsible for the heavy deficit of the past 12 months. Estimates the next fiscal deficit could top the $20 billion level are based on possible escalation of troop strength in Vietnam.

Exact figures on tax receipts, spending and the deficit for the year just ended won't be available for another three weeks. But the best estimates of the Budget Bureau and the Treasury Department provide these statistics:

Spending: About $127.5 billion, roughly $800 million lower than January's estimates.

Deficit: About $11 billion, $1.3 billion higher than projected last January.

This was the second biggest "peacetime" deficit in history, exceeded only by deficits during World War I, World War II and fiscal 1959, when the deficit hit $12.4 billion.

The largest deficit ever in an administrative budget was $57.4 billion during World War II in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1943.

For the new fiscal year, Fowler has estimated spending at $136.5 billion and tax receipts at $122.9 billion. The expected deficit of $13.6 billion compares with the $8.1 billion figure projected last January.

This revised figure assumes passage of the 6 per cent surtax on individual and corporate income taxes to take effect today as originally planned. President Johnson originally set July 1 as the date for the tax hike, but hasn't even sent such legislation to Congress.

The deficit could increase $2.2 billion more if the effective date of the surtax were delayed until Jan. 1, the date now mentioned by administration officials.

In Texas, President Johnson signed a bill yesterday raising the permanent debt ceiling to $358 billion effective today. The permanent ceiling had been $285 billion but the Treasury operated under a $336 temporary level the past several months.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Swimming After Meals Mainly Is Heavy Strain To The Heart

VAN DELLEN

L. Z. writes: "All my life I have been told that a person should not go swimming within one hour after a meal. Is this an old wives' tale or a well documented precautions?"

There are logical reasons why a person should not go swimming immediately after eating, especially in cold water.

Following a meal considerable blood is channeled to the upper part of the gastrointestinal tract to help the digestive processes. This increases the work load on the heart.

THOSE WITH angina pectori (hardening of the coronary arteries that bring blood to the heart muscle) may develop chest pain if they exert themselves following a meal. Some of the blood needed by the heart during exertion is diverted into the abdomen to aid digestiin.

This is mentioned to demonstrate the effects of stress on a handicapped heart shortly after eating. Swimming also is exertion and those with angina will develop pain and more so when the water is cold.

Under these circumstances, an additional supply of blood is diverted initially from the heart muscle into the epidermis to warm the chilled skin.

THE YOUNG person with no evidence of heart trouble need not be warned against swimming after eating. Catastrophies have occurred among "healthy" swimmers who did not know they had a heart defect.

On the other hand, there is no merit in subjecting the organ to the added strain of a dip in the pool soon after eating. The diversion of blood may also encourage leg cramps.

Swimming differs from walking in that the individual does not have a place to rest when in distress.

THOSE sunbathing, floating about, or walking in a warm pool after eating a snack need not follow these precautions.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope is accompanies request to the I-J.

CHEWING LESSONS

Mrs. T.A. writes: How can I teach my 26-month-old infant to chew? She insists upon bolting meat and other foods, no matter how I try to teacher her to masticate, even using gestures.

REPLY

Many healthy children bolt their food and in this respect, behave like animals. They learn in time thru example and experience.

DEMON RUM

J. S. writes: Ear noises have bothered me for more than two months. I am a great-grandmother of six. My physician tells me that I am in good health. Should I give up my two rum and colas a day?

REPLY

I would say no, unless the noises developed shortly after you begin to drink rum and cola.

THYROID ACTIVITY

A. V. writes: Can an overactive thyroid gland affect the heart?

REPLY

Yes; it may lead to an irregular beat, heart strain, and enlargement unless treated. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on overactive thyroid gland.

PRESSURE REMEDIES

T. M. writes: Are shots good for high blood pressure?

REPLY

A shot of whisky is recommended occasionally but otherwise most high blood pressure remedies come in tablet, capsule, or liquid form.

IN BED WITH CAST?

O. J. writes: Does a person have to stay in bed when wearing a cast on the spine because of a slipped idsk?

REPLY

Not after the cast is set.

Today's Health Hint — The shut-in will appreciate a visit or a letter.

Sausalito Pupils Due Home From Mexico

Sixty pupils at Sausalito's Richardson Bay School are to return Monday from a two-week trip to Mexico which was to take them as far south as Mazatlan.

They are scheduled to arrive at 7 p.m. in the school parking lot.

The pupils are members of the school's Spanish club, and are accompanied by 11 teachers and parents.

Suit Transferred To Marin In Traffic Death

A Hamilton Air Force Base master sergeant on two years probation for manslaughter in the Aug. 15 traffic fatality of a social worker from Mill Valley has been sued for $100,000 in Marin Superior Court.

Harold and Sarah D. Darrow, of Iowa, parents of victim Gene E. Darrow of 116 Marguerite Avenue, accuse Sgt. Kenneth O. Henderson of negligent driving in the head-on collision of Highway 101.

Sergeant Henderson, 41, of 152 West Kelly Drive on the base, had pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court Jan. 9 to manslaughter. California Highway Patrol said he was driving the wrong way on the highway.

The civil suit, originally filed Jan. 30 in San Francisco Superior Court, was transferred to Marin yesterday.

Today is Saturday, July 1, the 182nd day of 1967 with 183 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Jupiter, Mars and Venus.

Born on this day in 1725 was Jean Baptiste, a leading French general on the side of America in the Revoltionary War.

On this day in history:

In 1859, the first intercollegiate baseball game was played at Pittsfield, Mass., Amherst beating Williams, 66-to-32.

In 1898, "Teddy" Roosevelt was nominated for the first time by the Democrats to run for the presidency and he became a four time winner.

In 1946, the first postwar test of the atomic bomb took place at Bikini Atoll in the Pacific.

A thought for the day — The Roman poet Horace once said: "He has half the deed done, who has made a beginning."

Fine Play As Well As Bidding Made Italians World Champs

In winning the world championship a few weeks ago the Italians crushed North America by superior bidding, but there was nothing wrong with their play of the cards.

Today's hand shows Girogio Belladonna and Benito Garozzo in a defensive gem that brought in 10 international match points

Garozzo opened the eight of diamonds from the West hand, and Belladonna won with the ace, continuing with the king, queen and then the ten of diamonds.

Perhaps Garozzo would have acted even if Belladonna had taken the ten of diamonds first and then led his ace, king and queen. Belladonna's unusual method of playing the suit warned Garozzo that something was expected of him.

Only one unusual thing was possible, and Garozzo did it by ruffing with the ten of spades.

This forced declarer to overruff with dummy's king of spades.

BIG PROBLEM

When declarer then led a spade from dummy, Belladonna followed suit with the six. Declarer had to decide whether to play the queen, relying on West to have at least one more spade, or whether to take a deep finesse with the seven of spades.

The argument for taking a deep trump finesse was that this was necessary if Belladonna had a clear and definite motive in playing the diamonds as he had.

The argument against was that Belladonna had no other attractive play to make.

It would be a bad joke on South if he took a deep finesse and lost a trump trick when the trumps were harmlessly divided.

Since there was no way for South to know the right play, he followed the odds.

West was unlikely to be short both in diamonds and in spades.

Declarer played the queen of spades and lost his contract.

REAGAN SIGNS FIRST BUDGET

Gov. Ronald Reagan is congratulated by Assemblyman Don Mulford (left) and Sen. John F. McCarthy of San Rafael after he signed a record $5.08 billion state budget for the fiscal year that began at midnight. Also on hand for last night's signing were Sen. Richard Dolwig (right) and Assemblyman Robert Crown. (See story on page 1.) (AP Wirephoto)

'Luxuries' Bill Defeated

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation which would cut off welfare aid to recipients who used the money to buy "luxury items" has been defeated by the Senate Finance Committee.

The measure, by Sen. John Schmitz, R-Tustin, was killed on a split voice vote last night.

It would have prohibited certain welfare recipients from using welfare aid to purchase color television sets, jewelry, alcoholic beverages and certain other non-essential items.

The committee yesterday also defeated a resolution by Schmitz that would have asked state agencies advertising "free" services to say in their advertisements that the services are paid for with taxes.

Forgery Suspect Is Booked Into Jail

John Elwood Sullivan, 59, of Los Padres, San Luis Obispo County, was booked in county jail yesterday on a felony charge of forgery. Arraignment in Marin Municipal Court is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Sullivan is accused of forging a $531 check Aug. 12, 1964, with intent to defraud Roberts and Aguirre builders, 1608 Grant Avenue, Novato.

Gang Way! 250 Pounds Of Feminine Fury On Skates

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Watching Earlene Brown, her arm cocked and grasping a shot or discus, you probably never would have guessed how great an all-around athlete—or versatile a woman—she is.

At 250 pounds, she looked like just a big fat woman who could propel either weight considerable distances. She did, for 12 years, setting American records of 54-9 in the shot and 184-plus—since broken—in the discus. She won a bronze medal in the shot and placed fourth in the discus in the 1960 Olympics. She was the only American woman ever in three consecutive Olympics.

Versatile: softball beginning at age 11, basketball, volleyball, bowling, even football—and as a hobby, 8-ball pool. A Compton College coach noticed her natural grace and agility and persuaded her to try the shot. She won in her first meet.

A divorcee, she's the mother of an 11-year old son. She owns a Negro beauty shop in Los Angeles which she leases. A beautician, she works spare time in a Caucasian salon in Santa Monica. She loves "music of all kinds, especially sweet jazz; and to dance, all the latest, including The Skate."

Spare time?

Yes. For $40,000 a year, the one - time amateur star just signed a contract with the New Yorkers of the International Roller Derby League. She's still 250 pounds and the biggest woman ever to put on roller skates professionally. But now she's a solid 250 on a 5-9 frame that the skating lassies try hard to avoid.

"I just changed fat to muscle," Earlene said of her steady weight.

Off the track she's easy going and friendly, but not on it. In a previous go at the roller derby, she came out with a broken leg that kept her sidelined for months.

Why did she turn pro?

"Not so much for the money as to see how well I could do as a pro athlete before I lost my athletic ability." She'll be 32 this month.

Hard to learn to skate?

"I've been skating all my life and I'm agile. It's a matter of learning balance and I'm still learning. I'm not the fastest, but I'm good on defense."

Pretty rough game?

"I've been in some tough fights—broke my leg in one fall—but I don't let them push me around. If you let them push you, they'll pick on you. Lots of times I start a hassle to keep them off of me.

"I have to bump the speedsters to slow them down. I'm hard to pass, but speedsters can outmaneuver me sometimes."

Good only on defense?

"In Los Angeles once I went out on my own and scored a point," she smiled proudly. "When I come through a jam from the rear I bust everyone. They're laying all over the floor. I'm noted for my bowling-alley break-through."

Meaning she spills rival skaters like 10-pins. Even though she is an easy-going softie off the boards.

Giant Bats Still Boom But Defense Collapses

COMBINED AP & UPI

PHILADELPHIA — The San Francisco Giants are turning on the power, but do they have the defense and pitching to take them to the pennant?

San Francisco blasted 19 hits last night in another wild show as they dumped Philadelphia 12-3, but the trouble was that it all happened after the Phils had romped 10-3 in the opener of a twi-night twin bill.

The Giants managed only seven hits in the opener with Dick Dietz' homer accounting for the three tallies. But Gaylord Perry, a 20-game winner last season but 5-10 this year, didn't have his stuff and Philadelphia rolled to the easy win.

The old Giant bugaboo of missed double play chances helped crush San Francisco hopes.

But the Giants showed the power in the nightcap that they showed in winning three out of four at league-leading St. Louis. Ollie Brown led the way with four hits and his six hits in the two games boosted the young outfielder over the .300 mark.

Jim Hart drove in four runs as he also continued his hot hitting. And Jay Alou and Jim Davenport rapped three hits apiece.

It all made life pretty easy for Juan Marichal, who did not have his best stuff, but still ran his record to 11-6. He and Claude Osteen of the Dodgers are the only ones to have won that many in the majors. Marichal was tagged for seven hits and fanned four.

Willie Mays hit a double and a single in the first game and doubled home a run in the second. He was rested in the nightcap until he walked as a pinch hitter in the seventh. With three for six he boosted his batting average to an even .300.

Willie's hitting surge started with a string of six straight against St. Louis right after the news that he had been dropped from the starting lineup for this year's All-Star game.

Tonight, new Giant act Mike McCormick takes his 8-3 record in against Rick Wise (2-3) of the Phils. Game time is 5 o'clock, PDT.

McCormick has completed his last three games, including a 6-0 shutout of the St. Louis Cardinals last Tuesday.

If he can maintain this hurling style, Mike will develop a badly needed bulwark in the San Francisco pitching staff. Once a

TOO LATE, TITO—Giants second baseman Tito Fuentes forced Phillies' John Briggs at second in this first game, fifth inning action last night but has relay to first was too late for double-play. JACK HANLEY

Conlan Book A Must For Baseball Buffs

PHILADELPHIA — Jocko Conlan's book "Jocko" is a must for anyone who loves baseball. Conlan is a master of the anecdote. When he tells a story you are a box seat eyewitness to the actual event.

Here is a typical Jocko story that unfolds in the Toledo clubhouse in 1930 when Conlan was a minor league ball player:

"They talk about Casey Stengel and his conversations when he was managing the Yankees and the Mets. You should have heard him when he was the manager at Toledo. He'd walk through the clubhouse in his underwear and he'd look around and he'd say sweetly, 'Are all my boys here?'

"Casey called his meetings at 10:30 a.m. even though the games then didn't start until three in the afternoon. They were the only meetings I can ever recall in baseball where the players got there early.

"Casey dressed as he talked. One day he had everything on except his pants. It was a Sunday and we had a doubleheader which started at two-thirty instead of three and, I swear, Casey talked steadily, without stopping, from 10:30 until a couple of minutes after two.

Casey Showed How He Hit Curves . . .

"That day he was explaining to Max Rosenfeld how to hit the curve. Casey had a bat in his hand, and he'd cock it and swing it, and he'd talk about how he hit .368 in the National League — which he did, and don't forget that Casey was some ballplayer, a great clutch hitter.

"He'd say, 'Now, this is the way I did it in the National League. You stand there and you watch that pitcher and you cock the bat, and you lay for that curve ball.' Rosenfeld was nodding his head and saying, 'Yes. Okay. All right.'

"Max had on a light Palm Beach suit — he hadn't had a chance to dress with Casey talking — and he was sitting right in front of Casey. There was a box filled with sawdust between them, a low box filled with chew tobacco and all the slop that guys who had been playing cards in the clubhouse had tossed into it.

. . . And How To Ruin A Guy's Suit . . .

"Casey was using it as an imaginary home plate as he explained to Max how Max should wait on the pitch, and lay for the curve, and how to hit it, and how Casey did it when he was playing ball.

"McGraw always told us to lean over,' said Casey. And he leaned over that sawdust box as he smacked the box. The slop—all of it—hit Max, right in the Palm Beach suit, right down the front of it. Max jumped up and he was almost crying.

"Casey gave him a look, tossed the bat away and said, 'Well. That's the way I hit 'em.'

"By then it was two o'clock and verybody started through the runway that led to the dugout. I picked up the ball bag and followed Casey who had a fungo bat but didn't have his pants on. I didn't say a word. I walked right along with him after we reached the field.

. . . And How To Attract Attention

"There were a lot of women in the grandstand crowd and they tittered, and the crowd began to shout "Casey, Casey, where are your pants?"

"Casey stopped, looked down, turned to me and said 'Why, I haven't got my pants on.' I smiled. He hit me right across the shins with that fungo bat and said, 'Why didn't you tell me I didn't have my pants on?'

"Why, Casey, I didn't even notice."

ART WALL
He's in control

Top Pros In Back Of Wall

MONTREAL (UPI) — This week the name of the game in golf is neither putting nor driving—it's control and "quiet man" Art Wall has it in spades.

He holds the 36-hole lead in the $200,000 Canadian Open with a 67-70—137, two shots better than Billy Casper and Dale Douglass.

The 43-year-old Pennsylvanian, who hasn't won a championship since he won this same event seven years ago in Toronto, not only has conquered this tight, poorly conditioned (par 35-36—71, 6,600 yards) municipal course but, more important, the graying bespectacled Wall has been in control of himself.

SOUNDING OFF

While most of the touring pros have been sounding off about the shape of the golf course and losing their enthusiasm for competing, Wall apparently has made the best of a bad situation. And if he needs any proof, IBM's computers will back it up.

After two rounds, IBM figures say Wall is no better than the 35th best driver in the field of 159 starters and is tied for 98th in putting (who says you drive for show and putt for dough?). But his control on approach shots has been unbeatable, reaching 33 of 36 greens in regulation to rank No. 1.

SCORES SOAR

Despite almost perfect weather (overcast and only a slight breeze) the scores generally were higher than the day before. First round leader Laurie Hammer, who had a 66, shot a 74 yesterday. Only five players were in the 60s in the second round. Douglass and Jay Robert each had four-under 67s; Lou Graham had a 68 and Kel Nagle (71-69—140) and Bob Goalby (74-69—143) had 60s. Opening day 11 were in the 60s.

With two rounds to go, most eyes still were on those millionaire fairway twins, Arnie Palmer and Jack Nicklaus. Palmer was five shots back at 142 and "happy to be there the way I've been playing." Nicklaus, the U.S. Open champion was only three shots off the pace after rounds of 69-72.

White Sox Hurlers Head 'Star' Staff

BOSTON (AP) — Gary Peters (9-3 won-lost record) and Joe Horlen (9-1), the left-right punch of the high-flying Chicago White Sox, headed an eight-man pitching staff named today to the American League All-Star team.

Chosen to work with Peters and Horlen in attempting to end the National League's four-year All-Star domination in the 38th classic July 11 at Anaheim were Dean Chance (10-6) of Minnesota, Jim Lonborg (9-3) of Boston, Jim McGlothlin (7-2) of California, Jim Hunter (8-5) of Kansas City, Al Downing (8-5) of New York and Steve Hargan (9-6) of Cleveland.

Peters and Downing are the only left-handers.

Yesterday the A.L. announced eight reserves, including Mickey Mantle of the Yankees, Don Mincher and Jim Fregosi of California, Dick McAuliffe of Detroit, Max Alvis of Cleveland, Paul Casanova of Washington, Tony Conigliaro of Boston, Tommie Agee of Chicago and Andy Etchebarren of Baltimore.

The starting lineup, selected in a poll of players, was announced earlier this week.

The starting lineup will be Harmon Killebrew, Minnesota, 1b; Rod Carew, Minnesota, 2b; Brooks Robinson, Baltimore, 3b; Rico Petrocelli, Boston, ss; Frank Robinson, Baltimore, Al Kaline, Detroit, and Carl Yastrzemski, Boston outfielders; Bill Freehan, Detroit, catcher.

CASSIUS CLAY
Talks retirement

Clay Hints At Retirement; Pooh-Poohs Heavy Tourney

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Cassius Clay, dethroned as heavyweight boxing champion by the World Boxing Association, said yesterday Sonny Liston could whip all eight boxers the WBA has selected for an elimination series to find a new titleholder.

He scoffed, at a news conference, at the series, saying:

"Boxing is no good if the people don't pay. The American people are too smart to pay to see those boys. Making a homemade champion is no good.

"I've beaten them all."

Actually, he has beaten some of the eight; hasn't fought others.

"I'm watching Joe Frazier and Jerry Quarry," indicating he thinks they're the best of the eight.

Clay also said "I'm deciding right now on retirement," but flatly refused to make such an announcement now.

MINISTRY FIRST

"The ministry comes first," he went on, and said his spiritual manager, Herbert Muhammad, is not now managing him, but is busy with religious work.

He said he writes poetry no longer, that he had done it "just to promote fights. Now that I have the title I don't need poetry."

And he said he'll preach his first sermon Sunday, in the Black Muslim Temple in San Francisco. As to his subject, he said:

"I never have a speech outlined. I'll just sit down and think it over."

Clay came to San Francisco to participate in a national convention of CORE, Congress of Racial Equality.

Safe Boating Week July 2-8

Gov. Ronald Reagan has proclaimed July 2-8 as Safe Boating Week.

Governor Reagan pointed to the increasing number of boats on California waterways and the grim statistics of 103 persons killed and 232 others injured in 591 boating accidents in California last year.

The proclamation was backed by a state Senate and Assembly concurrent resolution encouraging all California boaters to "learn boating safety practices and avoid accidents by replacing carelessnesss with thoughtfulness and boating courtesy."

A Teen-Ager's First Car

Your Future Depends On Insurance

Last of a Series

By HENRY GREGOR FELSEN

I want to ask you a simple little question. Nothing more than your life depends on the answer. The question is: What are you doing about automobile insurance? If you answer that you intend to get your insurance after you have bought the car, your life is in danger.

It is essential that you buy auto insurance before you buy the car. Your entire future may be decided by the exact minute your auto insurance goes into effect.

You can't actually buy the detailed policy before you have a car. But you can, and should do this: Find a good insurance company that is willing to accept you; arrange the kind of coverage you need and want, to take effect the moment the car becomes yours.

Only now are you ready to look for and buy a car.

When you find the one you want and are closing the deal, all you have to do is phone your insurance company with the details. Your insurance coverage starts before the ink is dry on your signature.

There are several good reasons why your auto insurance needs to be arranged for in advance. I'll start with the most important.

1. The car is yours. You get

Hurlers Become Sluggers In Topsy-Turvy N. L. Race

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The pitchers turned hitters and the hitters turned pitchers as the National League turned topsy turvy, and General Manager Joe Brown of Pittsburgh capped it all by giving his team a vote of confidence instead of his manager.

Chris Short, trying to show he can still win after missing 40 days with a torn knee ligament, started the shenanigans last night by proving he can hit, too. He backed his seven-hitter with a three-run double that completed Philadelphia's 10-3 victory over San Francisco in the first game of a doubleheader.

Juan Marichal carried on as usual in the nightcap, riding a 19-hit Giant attack that buried the Phillies 12-3. But Philadelphia still managed the unusual.

The last of six Phillie pitchers turned out to be Cookie Rojas, Philadelphia's valuable jack of all trades who now has played every position in the major leagues.

Claude Osteen followed this happening by lining a lead off home run in the ninth inning that won his own game as Los Angeles beat Houston 5-4.

Then it was Steve Blass' turn for Pittsburth, backing up Brown's pre-game vote of confidence. His two-run single in the eighth inning gave him a five-hit 3-1 triumph over Atlanta.

But don't forget the Chicago Cubs, who continued their amazing reversal with a 7-5 victory over Cincinnati, their 11th victory in 12 games.

The New York Mets did not surprise anyone, however, losing to league-leading St. Louis 4-1.

Osteen almost didn't make it as the Astros clobbered him for four runs in the first three innings. But his sacrifice fly and Wes Parker's three-run inside-the-park homer in the second inning gave him his chance in the ninth.

Blass' hit broke a 1-1 deadlock and Pittsburgh's five-game losing streak in a game delayed twice by rain for a total of one hour and 43 minutes.

His complete game, only the ninth in 71 games for Pirate pitchers, moved disappointing Pittsburgh into a tie for fifth place. It followed Brown's talk to his players in the locker room after sending out manager Harry Walker and the coaches.

Brown refused to call his 15-minute session a vote of confidence for Walker or a tongue-lashing for the players, who were early season favorites to win the pennant.

It was a "vote of confidence to the players," he said, adding that he doesn't believe in votes of confidence for a manager. But Brown told the players Walker would be their manager for a "long time."

"If this club doesn't win the National League pennant," Brown said, "it's not because they're mismanaged. It's because they didn't want to pay the price to win."

Meanwhile, the second-place Cubs, who haven't finished in the first division since 1946, stayed 1½ games behind St. Louis. They built a 6-0 lead on homers by Ron Santo and Billy Williams and Bill Hands pitched hitless ball for 6⅓ innings before fading and Cal Koonce and Chuck Hartenstein rescued him.

Julian Javier drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly behind Larry Jaster as the Cardinals broke a three-game losing streak. Jerry Grote homered for the Mets.

TEEN-AGER'S FIRST CAR

Insurance Coverage In Three Categories

behind the wheel and drive proudly off the lot. You are a serious boy, and your first goal is an insurance company office to arrange for a policy.

Two minutes after you drive away, another driver runs a red light at an intersection and hits your car. The accident is all his fault.

But, as an uninsured driver, you may lose your license for as long as three years, just for being involved.

2. You drive home safely. Before you look for insurance, you want to show Mom and Dad your new car. You park in the driveway, leaving the car in gear to hold it.

Your little brother climbs in the car and accidentally hits the gear shift lever, knocking it into neutral.

The car rolls out of the drive, across the street, and runs over a neighbor's child. Uninsured, responsible, you may have to pay a part of your earnings to that family for the next 20 years.

Another reason to shop in advance is this: The best insurance companies, in terms of rates charged and services rendered, are reluctant to accept teen-age business. Even though the premiums may be a hundred dollars higher than for an adult, there is more likelihood the teen-age client will cost the company $10,000 or $20,000 in claims.

IMMEDIATE NEED

If you wait until you have a car, and you have immediate need of insurance and no time to look, you may be forced to buy from some company which will insure you quickly, but which will also charge heavily for the service.

You may also find yourself in the hands of an expensive company which does not have a good record of service to its customers and which will not give you the protection you need.

Since insurance laws differ from state to state, your own insurance man can give you the details of the coverage you must have and the costs.

In general, auto insurance can be divided into three categories:

1. Insurance you must have (liability).

2. Insurance you should have (comprehensive, protection against uninsured motorists, medical, and possibly income payments).

3. Insurance you may want (collision and upset, towing service, insurance on trailer).

This is what these various insurances insure:

1. Liability.

This is the must insurance that protects you from damage suits for injury done to other people and property, for which you are responsible.

2. Comprehensive.

This is the optional (if you own your car outright) insurance that pays you for such losses as from theft, vandalism, storms, falling objects, fire, etc.

Cost of the coverage is somewhat determined, by the value of your car, since all you collect is A.C.V., actual cash value of the damage. If your car isn't worth much, you may want to skip this coverage and take your chances.

However, if you are financing a car, you will be required to carry enough comprehensive and collision insurance to pay the lender the amount he has loaned you.

3. Collision, Uninsured Motorist.

Collision: This coverage pays for damage to your car caused by collision or upset, no matter who is at fault.

This is the well-known $50 or $100 deductible insurance. This means you pay the first $50 or $100 of the damage, and the insurance company pays the rest. The lower the amount you pay, the more costly the insurance. On a very cheap car, it isn't really worth carrying.

Uninsured motorist: This very inexpensive (only a few dollars a year) insurance ought to be a must with you.

What it does is protect you if you are hurt by a motorist who does not have liability insurance and who cannot pay damages. With this insurance, your own company will pay you for the injury you suffered, should you be unable to collect from the offending party.

New Water Speed Mark By Cal Man

COMBINED AP & UPI

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala. — A gleaming white speed boat called "The Hustler," powered by a jet engine and driven by Lee Taylor, flashed to a new world's water speed record here yesterday on glassy Guntersville Lake.

The 2½-ton craft sped over the two-mile course at an average speed of 285.212 miles per hour to smash the old record of 277.333 held by the late Donald Campbell of England.

The ride was like "riding on a cloud," according to Taylor, a Downey, Calif., businessman. He toured the first mile at a fabulous 288.126 miles per hour and averaged 282.303 on the return trip.

GOLF

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — Catherine Lacoste, a 22-year-old amateur from Paris, shot a one-under-par 70 and took a five stroke lead after 36 holes in the national Women's Open Golf Championship.

BASKETBALL

DENVER, Colo. — Bob Bass, head coach at Oklahoma Baptist University, was named coach of Denver's new American Basketball Association team, the Rockets.

SWIMMING

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Pam Kruse, a 17-year-old high school student from Pompano Beach, Fla., took 1.2 seconds off the world record for the women's 400-meter freestyle while competing in the Fort Lauderdale Open Swimming and Diving Championships.

HORSE RACING

INGLEWOOD — R. Tux, $3.80, beat Triple Tux in the feature race at Hollywood Park.

GENERAL

SEQUALS, Italy — Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight champion who died Thursday in his native village here, will be buried tomorrow in this north Italian village.

Carnera succumbed to cirrhosis of the liver and diabetes a month after returning from the United States, where he had settled since World War II.

Marin Softballers Swarm Over Foes In Santa Rosa

With Gary Swarm receiving credit for both pitching victories, a red-hot Sohner Tree Service softball team of San Anselmo continued on its winning ways last night with a doubleheader sweep in the Santa Rosa "A" League.

The Treemen upset the Sebastopol Merchants, 4-1, in the opener and toppled Stevenson's Equipment, 5-2, in the nightcap.

Morey Swarm, sidelined for two months after an attack of appendicitis, made his first start in the second game and pitched effectively for four innings. Brother Gary then relieved in the fifth with Sohner ahead by a 3-2 count and blanked the Santa Rosans over the final three innings.

Gary had limited Sebastopol to six hits in going the distance in the opener.

Sohner's win streak will be in jeopardy tonight when the team battles Mountain View's Fairchild Falcons in the semi-finals of the Hayward Invitational Tournament at 7 p.m. at Patrick Gomer field.

Weitzel 'Sisters' Win Tournament

The Meadow Club Women's Golf Club held a Big Sister-Little Sister Scotch Two Ball Tournament Thursday on the Fairfax links.

First — Mesdames John Weitzel, Philip McNamara, William Milliken, Roland King, 68½-76½—145; Second — Mesdames John Greene, George Kerrigan, T. N. Brown, Paul Satherm, 74½-73½—148; Third — Mesdames Arthur Latno, William Gurge, E. J. Hubbell, W. Laster, 73-75½—148½; Fourth — Mesdames J. W. Dickover, William Carewe, Harry Hensler, Frank Pagninni, 69½-80—149½.

Cornell Crew Wins

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — Cornell University won the Thames Cup for eight-oared boats at Henley Royal regatta today, crushing England's Nottingham and Union Rowing Club.

The English crew was leading at the start, but Cornell came back strongly and burned up the 1 mile, 550-yard River Thames course to win by 2 1-3 lengths in 7 minutes, 6 seconds.

San Rafael Opens Gruelling Schedule

The word is busy, nine times over.

The San Rafael Braves will kick off a hectic eight-day, nine-game schedule tonight, 8 o'clock, with a Western Baseball Association battle against the Ukiah Merchants at San Rafael's Albert Field.

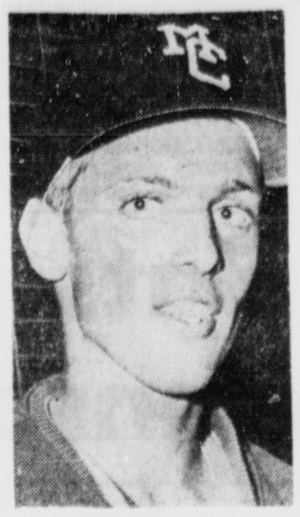
That's only the start. The murderous row sked continues tomorrow with a double-header against the same Merchants, starting at noon, stops for a break Monday, then continues with a non-league Fourth of July double-header against Pleasantville, beginning at 6:45 p.m. Tuesday. Then it's a single league game against Santa Rosa at Albert Field at 8 p.m. Friday. Next, the Braves trek to Santa Rosa for a single game at 8 p.m. Saturday and a double-header there at noon Sunday.

By that time Braves manager Joe Anselmo will know without a doubt what kind of a pitching staff he has.

NEW HURLERS

To prepare for the grueling slate, Anselmo has added three hurlers to his already arm-weary staff, bringing it up to ten. Latest additions are ex-Drake pitcher Steve Miller, recently dropped by the Houston Astros, Keith Walters of San Jose State and southpaw Ron Denslage of USF.

Ukiah brings something of a luckless but good-on-paper squad into the three-game series against Anselmo's west coast division leaders.



BEN BURCH
On the mound

The Merchants have yet to win a league play but local fans will have a chance to watch some homegrown talent on the squad. Catching for Ukiah will be Rocky Shone, former San Rafael standout while Jay Widmer, another ex-Bulldog, will be in left field. Shone started the summer semi-pro season with the Braves. He was all-league selection for the Cal freshman team earlier this year.

BURCH STARTS

Young Ben Burch will draw the starting pitching assignment for San Rafael tonight with Bob DeRosa and Bob Tobin throwing in tomorrow's double-header. After that, it will be anybody who's still standing.

Leading their division by two full games, the Braves are batting .326 as a team. Top batter among the regulars is Ron Gaspar, hitting .441. Rich Jeffries is close behind with a .418 showing. Gaspar also leads the club with 12 runs batted in and Joe Panella is the top slugger with a pair of homers.

The Braves have a season mark of 18-4 and are 7-2 in WBA play.

Pharmacy Board Needs Another Examination

"MAN, THOSE PILLS are expensive."

If you have had to get a prescription filled lately, you probably said just that to yourself and possibly out loud to the druggist.

Chances are you paid more than was necessary.

First, if your doctor will prescribe by generic term rather than by the commercial name of the medicine, you stand to save considerably for the same prescription.

If you ask why this is, don't expect to understand the answer easily. It is too mixed up with gobbledygook to unscramble. But the sales slip will tell the story. Order by a commercial trade name and you pay a higher price than if the prescription designates the drug by generic name.

Second, if you want to pay less, shop around.

It isn't easy. The pharmaceutical industry has a history of cartel-type operations. Only a few years ago the leaders of the California pharmacy trade association were convicted of price fixing in violation of federal law.

Unfortunately, those who have to buy prescription drugs have not been the beneficiaries of the usual fruits of the competitive free enterprise system.

It has not been long since the Governor's Consumer Counsel publicly lamented the "pitiful trickle" of information about drug prices which is revealed to buyers.

The industry, the profession and the State Board of Pharmacy have effectively discouraged dissemination of information to the public about prescription drug prices.

So it isn't easy to shop around, but it can be done.

THE INDUSTRY, THE profession and the state pharmacy board have tried and are trying apparently to squeeze down on drug stores that have the courage and forthrightness to advertise publicly information about their prescription prices.

Not many years ago, the board, at the behest of the druggists' trade association, took steps to adopt flat prohibitions on such advertising. There was some public outcry and this effort was thwarted.

But the pressure is once more on the druggist who tries by advertising to let the public know the facts about drug prices.

Traditionally and historically in America, the yardstick for determining the rightness of dissemination of information to the public has been simply whether or not it is truth.

If information is factual, or non-defamatory opinion, not a law or authority in the land could muzzle or suppress its dissemination.

The State Board of Pharmacy in California ignores that noble tradition.

Now the pharmacy board makes its own, different set of rules. The truth of what you advertise is not a defense against persecution by pharmacy board enforcers.

NO WONDER ONLY a handful of licensed druggists in Californai have the courage and conviction to continue to advertise in the face of official and unofficial pressure and harassment.

Fortunately, there always seem to be two or three in Marin who stand up to the establishment.

Right now a couple are "on the pan" with the pharmacy board. They refused to be intimidated.

In this self-government of ours one would assume that the pharmacy board exists solely to serve the people in general and not a special interest.

Where did the complaints come from which motivated the pharmacy board to "crack down" on the Marin druggists who choose to "let the public know"?

Did the complaints come from the drug-buying public?

Of course not.

The complaints came from the competitors of these druggists who believe the public is entitled to factual information and non-defamatory opinion.

IS THE STATE BOARD of Pharmacy serving the public or the special interests of the drug trade in this matter?

It is hard to see how muzzling the dissemination of factual information could possibly serve the general public.

It's time for the Legislature to take another look at the pharmacy board's operations.

And while they are about it, how about reconsidering the idea of having lay public members form the majority of the pharmacy board instead of continuing domination by the druggists of their own regulatory body.

Meanwhile, the courageous Marin druggists who try to buck the suppression deserve the support and appreciation of all.

U Thant Probably Wishing He Had Stepped Down Last Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — U Thant, secretary-general of the United Nations, is a mild Burmese who likes bacon and eggs and can get in a jam by saying too much or saying too little.

Five years ago what he said wasn't much but it turned out to be too much. He was trying to reunify the Congo at the time and got angry at the leaders of the secessionist Katanga government. He called them a "bunch of clowns."

HE WAS CRITICIZED for that. This year, and he still stings from it, he was criticized for saying too little, or nothing at all, instead of consulting the U.N. General Assembly or the Security Council when Egypt told him to pull his U.N. peace-keeping troops out of Egypt immediately.

He did so promptly. And from that point relations between Israel and the Arabs headed straight for the short war which started this month and lasted less than a week, with the Arabs winding up on the short end.

Protests piled up on him. The climax came last week in the United Nations when Israel's foreign minister, Abba Eban, said Thant had acted "disastrously swift" in yielding to the demands of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

THIS REALLY irritated Thant who quickly issued a statement that explained he had no choice, that Nasser had voluntarily allowed the U.N. force to stand on the Egyptian side of the border with Israel and could therefore order him out when he wished.

In the course of this Thant implied Israel was in a poor position to complain that the U.N. troops had been pulled out of Egypt since Israel never permitted them inside Israel at all.

The Eban attack must have been a sore harpoon for this week Thant fired back again in his own defense, this time with such a detailed and lengthy statement that it took up almost three full newspaper pages.

He didn't need all that room. But his explanation—which in part was a repetition of his answer to Eban—squarely put the finger on Egypt as the one who precipitated the war.

NOW ALMOST A month after the war the biggest unanswered question—and Thant didn't answer it, either — is still: who fired the first shot? But from Thant's explanation it was Egypt which lit the fire.

He said in mid-May the Egyptians told him to remove U.N. troops immediately from El Sabha in the northeast corner of the Sinai Peninsula, right on the border with Israel, and from Sharm el Sheik, in the southeast corner of Sinai, a point which can control shipping into the Gulf of Aqaba.

When Thant didn't act fast enough, Egyptian soldiers took over in both places and it wasn't long before Nasser decided to blockade the Gulf of Aqaba. This became the sorest point of all in Israeli-Arab relations.

In his statement Thant said the long, simmering hostility between Israel and Egypt—he called it a "direct confrontation"—was made to bubble and boil by Egypt's decision "to move its forces up to the line."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Dikran Martin Tells His Views

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Because there is apparent concern about Carol Marsh's Reporter's Notebook of June 15 on drug use among college students, perhaps it is important to convey some further impressions on this most important social issue.

There is absolutely no attempt being made at the College of Marin by myself or any other counselor to "urge" or "nudge" students into taking marijuana, LSD or any other substance which I term "additives." In my opinion it is quite unnecessary for people to take any kind of additive to enhance their well-being.

I do not consider myself an expert or authority in drug use. I have never seen the substances marijuana and LSD. At the same time I could not consider myself a full-functioning counselor and serious educator if I did not make every attempt to stay sensitive to the paramount personal and social concerns of young people.

I have tried to encourage direct dialogue — open and frank discussion. I work hard to create situations whereby students can talk with me about these matters in absolute confidence. I was the first person at the College of Marin that took bus loads of students, faculty and other interested adults to Synanon House at Marshall back when this was a most "controversial" institution in the county. I was the person on the campus that first arranged for a campus lecture and discussion on LSD back when most people were not acquainted with words like psychedelic and hallucinogenic.

Allow me to describe in some detail what I expect to do in the future at College of Marin with respect to this social issue—the use of drugs as additives. I plan to hold a series of discussions about drug use in our society. The hope is that we will have speakers come to convey to all those interested in any facts, impressions, or assumptions that are in their opinion pertinent to this social issue.

According to Mr. Diamond it is the counselor's group opinion that students taking these substances are in the minority. I wonder if Mr. Diamond and these counselors understand the consequences of their group professional conclusion if the frequency-usage facts prove their assumptions wrong. Mr. Diamond also claims these 12 counselors are "indeed distressed at Mr. Martin's generalization on drug usage." I assume from his statement that these counselors are sufficiently aware of my ideas, attitudes and concerns with respect to drug use that they can articulate them to me in writing.

Youth Raps Society; How Will It Help?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The other evening we sat for two and a half hours while young speakers from a high school graduating class, and old speakers, representing the faculty, castigated the audience and the United States in general, for our "middleclass morality," for the war in Vietnam, starvation in India, racial prejudices, capital punishment, and for opposing demonstrations, poetry and long hair. We got a good roasting for not being "aware" and "concerned" and we heard the class of 1967 passionately exhorted not to turn out like its parents. . . .

As you listen to these bright young people tick off the long lists of failures (Earl Warren and the teachers remind us that "our nation was born in protest") you begin to wonder what they propose to do about it now that they have it so well diagnosed. To recognize that society is sick, if indeed it is, is one thing; to make it well is another. . . .

It is true that the world is full of illness, misery, starvation and strife, but there is considerably less of it than there once was, and it is entirely possible that our established paths are leading us toward Utopia as well as any could.

Certainly complaining in itself is not productive improvement, and we are not so sure protesting even stimulates positive action. More often than not, protesting simply stirs up more trouble.

Mankind's real achievements are seldom made in mass. The progress we have been able to make is directly related to the enthusiasm with which our people have been able to work as individuals.

The "concern" and "awareness" and the protests which flow so abundantly today come, for the most part, from misinformed, lazy, meddling, under-developed brains. It is easier to criticize someone else than to do something yourself, and somehow it is always an attractive project to include everything in your responsibilities except yourself.

Our nation was not born in protest as they say. It was not the hoodlums at Boston Harbor, but the statesmen at Philadelphia who did the real work and created something better for mankind.

Funds For Hippies Upsets Family

Editor, Independent-Journal:

My family and I have only lived here in Marin County for four months. We like this area and are favorably impressed with our neighbors and the people who live here. We've purchased a modest home.

Last week we received our property tax assessment from the assessor. To put it mildly, the amount was staggering, almost astronomical. Now we read that our illustrious supervisors have "earmarked" $50,000 worth of extra medical funds for the expected influx of hippies this summer. I had to read this three or four times before I could actually believe my own eyes. Evidently it's true, as I've seen nothing on the printed page since then to refute it. This is the last straw.

There's no need to rehash in detail who and what these people are. Heaven knows, they've received enough publicity. This incident would be ludicrous in the extreme if this money didn't come out of the pockets of people who work for a living.

At least one good thing has come of it. My wife and I will know which supervisors NOT to vote for in the next election. We sincerely hope our fellow citizens will react in like manner. The ballot box appears to be our only recourse in this situation. Past history and experience indicate that verbal or written protests are futile. All they do is get it off the chest. That's what I'm doing.

Ghetto Summer: Blazing Or Cool?

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG, JR

Summer need not be a period of emptiness. It need not be a time of violence and racial tensions.

We seem to be slipping into a tragic summer tradition of riots and fear. The gulf in understanding between the races seems to be widening and communication is becoming more difficult.

This is a very serious situation and it's going to take the best efforts of people of goodwill of both races to solve. The first step has to be communication. The white majority must make the effort to understand that the frustrations in the ghetto run deep and the serious problems of the urban poor have to be solved.

THEY MUST BE AS strong in their condemnation of the exploitation of the ghetto which results in riots, as they are of the riots themselves.

And Negro citizens will have to strive to control those among them who think violence can cure social ills. It can't. Violence only begets more violence, and the innocent are the ones who are usually hurt.

There are some "crash" programs under way in various ghetto — summer job programs, temporary recreational facilities, and others — which some cities have set up to try to keep this summer "cool."

But temporary measures don't solve anything. When ghetto-dwellers see a sudden flurry of interest in June and see indifference to their fate return in September, they understand that the reason for this interest is merely to keep the boiling point low.

RACIAL PROBLEMS have to get year-round attention, and the vast potential of the disadvantaged must be put to use. Governmental action to end poverty and discrimination have to be joined by private and individual efforts.

Business will have to change its hiring practices which made Negroes the last ones hired and the first fired. Some companies have set admirable records in hiring minority group citizens, but others haven't gotten the message yet. Unions will have to shape up on this front too. Citizens groups will have to get behind efforts to improve slum schools and end segregated housing. Every institution and individual will have to contribute his bit to solving the problem.

But that's long range. What about now, this summer?

Well, if we have to do things piecemeal, every city must put everything its got into the ghetto. Public services have to be improved, jobs created, and some substantial efforts made to visibly improve life in the ghetto.

Perhaps the most important means of reducing tensions is for the police to act toward ghetto residents the way they act toward people in the richest part of town — with respect. Every major racial riot in recent years began with some police action which was ill-timed and ill-advised.

IN WELL-TO-DO suburbs the policeman is looked upon as the nice man who helps children across streets. In the ghetto he is too often known as the man who is too quick with an insult and who relies too often on the power of his billy club or pistol. A minority of policemen harm honest officers by extorting money and getting rakeoffs from illegal activities. The ghetto-dweller resents these abuses. Too often the police are seen more as an occupying force than as protectors.

This is unfair to the majority of policemen who are honest and who do treat citizens with respect. But the tinderbox of bitterness in the ghetto is too easily set off to allow officials to take their chances on police abuses going unnoticed. Ghetto patrolmen should get intensive training in human relations and should be picked for their sensitivity to the feelings of the people in the district.

I'D LIKE TO see summer become a time of peace again, and I hope that the irresponsible people who start these incidents, both whites and Negroes, keep this summer cool.

Bouquets And (No) Brickbats

BOUQUETS to the ad hoc committee members who worked for eight months to help set up Fair/Marin, a non-profit corporation which will operate the Civic Center auditorium and fairgrounds.

A BOUQUET to Mr. and Mrs. Charles John Dubs of Sausalito on their golden wedding anniversary. Dubs, retired locomotive engineer, and his wife Ruth have lived in Sausalito for a half century.

BOUQUETS to Will McClendon and Hoy Buell, two seniors at Redwood High School, who have joined forces to start a private enterprise for the summer. They invested in an old truck and a few tools and are in the business of weeding, pruning, hauling, and anything else they can do.

A BOUQUET to Mr. and Mrs. George Rudebeck of Mill Valley on their golden wedding anniversary. Both native Californians, they have lived in Marin for 36 years.

BOUQUETS to the group of 20 Southern Marin women who are contacting various churches to drum up support for the Boys' Club of Southern Marin in Marin City.

POOR PEOPLE OVER 65 OFTEN FORGOTTEN

More than 5 million Americans over 65 live in poverty, forgotten by most people. Why are the elderly poor so often neglected? A government report gave these reasons:

Older people are seldom seen on the streets. Because they also lack sufficient education they cannot protect or make their distress felt by the public.

Usually in failing health, they often live in lonely rooms in rundown hotels, in shacks or in rural areas.

The report called for expanded programs of aid for the elderly. This would include providing them with adequate shelter, healthful meals and medicine. Useful work, recreation and companionship were stated as other needs.

Seek out and personally assist some older persons who are lonely and poverty-stricken. You can be God's instrument in bringing into their lives something of the love and security that the Lord wishes each of them to enjoy as they progress through the world.

"I will turn their mourning into joy, I will comfort them, and give them gladness for sorrow."

(Jeremiah 31:13)

Let me serve, O Master, in communicating Your love to those who are lonely and neglected.

Nigeria Uprising Clouding Entire Unity Of Africa

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN
Associated Press Writer

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria had a bright future when it became independent of Britain in 1960. With 56 million people, it was the most populous state in Africa, and was rich in natural resources.

Today the nation is rent with tribal and religious strife, its future clouded. The Eastern region, an area the size of South Carolina, seceded on May 30 and proclaimed itself the Republic of Biafra, complete with its own flag, national anthem and most of the nation's oil wells.

But Biafra has not been recognized by any other nation, is under land and sea blockade by Nigeria, and may face war to achieve the sovereignty it claims. Lt. Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, 34, is rallying his 12.3 million people to fight the central government of Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, 33.

Ojukwu has set up his capital at Enugu and would very much like to keep the oil business going out of Port Harcourt, which has been shipping 400,000 barrels of crude oil a day. But Gowon has cut the main road from Lagos to the east at the Niger River bridge, stopped plane flights to the east, and sent out patrol boats to control the coast. He has also ordered oil companies to keep their payments coming to Lagos, and not send them to Biafra.

Biafra's secession stems from the tribal troubles that have shaken Nigeria's whole structure. Most of Baifra's people are Ibos, those in the north are Hausa and Fulani tribesmen, and those in the west are Yorubas. In the last 18 months, feuding between these segments has brought bloodshed and insurrection to Nigeria.

Ojukwu has called for total mobilization in Biafra. His army has a core of 3,000 trained men — mostly supply sergeants, drivers and auto mechanics. A frantic effort has raised it to an estimated 7,000, many of whom have had about six weeks drill.

The man who directed the raising of the Biafra army, Lt. Col. Hilary Njokwu, has quietly disappeared from the ranks of Ojukwu's military staff amid talk of a run-in with his chief.

In the first week after Ojukwu's dawn declaration of independence, federal Nigeria's show of force has been confined to promoting Gowon from Lt. Col. to Maj. General.

The new general ordered an embargo on the Biafra coast. But Nigeria's one frigate and two of its four patrol boats remained in Lagos. One was reported patrolling the Biafra coast. Another, the NNS Ibadan, once commanded by Lt. Cmdr. W. A. Anuku, now head of Biafra's navy, appears to be in Biafran hands.

Maj. Gen. Gowon called for general mobilization. The army laboriously started registering ex-servicemen. It issued an appeal for technicians — including sign writers.

The 7,000-man army's responsibility includes the security of about 320,000 square miles outside Biafra, an area twice the size of California with a population of about 40 million.

Gowon has cut off communication and postal service to Biafra. He has asserted Nigeria's legitimacy at the United Nations, and the Organization of African Unity.

So far, the federal government is banking on sanctions to bring down Biafra, although the government-controlled radio said "it is true economic sanctions have a notorious reputation for non-effectiveness, especially with the recent experience of Rhodesia in mind."

If sanctions are too slow and Biafra shows signs of hanging on, countries seeing a chance to do business with the new country may change their policy about recognition. Nigeria's Yoruba-dominated West, uneasy about remaining in a federation with the more populous North, may begin to consider the words of Yoruba politician Obafemi Awolowo. He said if the East seceded, the West would follow.

Awolowo and other politicians on record as favoring less central government have since been taken into the government of Gowon.

The breakup has its roots in centuries of deep tribal suspicion that rose to the surface after the British left. The British suppressed the rivalries not by force, but by providing what amounted to a non-tribal or non-partisan government. The aggressiveness of Eastern Ibos who moved to the North to do business alienated the slower North, resulting in a series of riots that reached a climax last September when thousands were murdered in the North. Biafra left the federation partly because it received no federal guarantee that further killings could be avoided.

The stakes are high. The East controls the $600 million oil business that was already a year ahead of production estimates. But more important to African countries is the possibility that if Nigeria blows to smithereens, the rest of Africa and its hopes for the Organization of African Unity will collapse into ineffectiveness.

Volunteers Man Phones In Bay Area

By DAVID LAMB

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—In a room strewn with maps and stocked with emergency instructions, the young volunteer waits for the call of death.

It comes 1,300 times a month. The silence-shattering jangle, the volunteer's unshaken voice, the anguished outburst from the other end of the line.

For this is the office of San Francisco Suicide Prevention, Inc. (SFSP), in what might be called the suicide capital of the United States.

San Francisco recorded 233 of the nation's 21,000-plus suicides last year. For each 100,000 residents here, there were 29.9 suicides, almost treble the national rate of 10.5 per 100,000.

Now the red phone rings and the volunteer—one of 100 who staff SFSP 24 hours a day, lifts the receiver and cradles it on her shoulder.

"Suicide prevention," she answers in a voice delicately intoned with efficiency and patience. "Can I help you?"

The caller, a graduate student from a foreign country, has one wish: to share his torment before he dies. Failure, he says, has become his shadowy companion, directing his will to live.

An overdose of pills already has started this man toward death. But the volunteer managed to soothe his panic, coax him into revealing his location. Within six minutes she had him speeding to a hospital in a police ambulance.

"Most of these people don't want to die any more than they want to live," said Bernard Mayes, executive director for SFSP. "Right up to the final moment, most are prepared to back off."

Suicide Prevention, which began in 1961 and operates on a $50,000 budget buoyed by federal, state and private funds, is one of 33 similar agencies established throughout the United States to deal with the nation's fifth biggest killer.

Here as elsewhere, suicide respects no hour and heeds no social barrier. If any trend is discernable, it is that the peak period of suicide in San Francisco is the early evening hours of a springtime Friday, the time when loneliness and anxiety apparently are most burdensome.

No one, including the SFSP, can explain San Francisco's emergence as a suicide mecca.

But every 90 minutes, someone in the San Francisco Bay area attempts to kill himself. The SFSP said about 1 in 15 succeeds.

Perhaps, Director Mayes said, San Francisco has achieved its dubious distinction because this is a city of transients, of persons who flee West to seek whatever it is that eludes them back home.

"We have no positive answers," Mayes said. "One man has been calling us for three years. He trusts us. And we have kept him alive, one call at a time. Some call, lose their courage and hang up

"The real prevention comes in helping these people while they're thinking about suicide. They don't want to die. They just want to end the pain. They're worth saving."

Mayes ended the interview abruptly to walk quickly to what he calls the emergency command post. The red phone was ringing again.

Behind The News

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

As the United Nations' debate on the Middle East crisis grew stale at midweek, Israel put some new fire into it by acting to assure itself that Jews would never again be barred from any part of the formerly divided city of Jerusalem.

Israel called its move to take control of the holy city a "remarriage." Critics, including the United States, called it "annexation." No matter what it was called, the move was sure to hurt Israel's chances of escaping some sort of censure by the world body.

As the U.N. recessed for a long weekend, the best resolution diplomats felt Israel could hope for would be one calling for a return to boundaries before the outbreak of the war June 5. In addition to the former Jordanian sector of Jerusalem, Israeli troops hold land on the western bank of the Jordan River, the Sinai Peninsula and parts of Syria.

At week's end, Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek said the city council had already succeeded in unifying all municipal services and utilities.

Kollek said the former Arab city council was dissolved Thursday. He indicated the all-Jewish council might take on Arab members as advisers to help with matters in the Old City, which the Arabs had controlled. The only legal currency in the city will be the Israeli pound.

Around The World Around The Clock

New Orleans: Actress Jayne Mansfield, 34, was killed Thursday in a car accident near New Orleans that also took the lives of Miss Mansfield's lawyer-companion Samuel S. Brody, 40, of Los Angeles, and driver Ronald B. Harrison, 20, of Mississippi City, Miss.

Rome: Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight boxing champion, died at Sequals, his birhplace in northern Italy, at the age of 60. His death Thursday occurred exactly 34 years from the day he won the title.

Saigon: On the military front action continued; on the political front Premier Nguyen Cao Ky agreed to withdraw from the South Vietnamese presidential race and run for vice president. A clandestine Viet Cong radio meanwhile implied that an American aide who had been a prisoner for two years, Gustav C. Hertz, had been executed.

Paris: Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin arrived here for weekend talks with French Premier Charles de Gaulle. Kosygin ended his 10-day visit to the United States Monday when he flew to Cuba for talks with Premier Fidel Castro.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Reagan Austerity Plan Now Up To Departments

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The economy programs of the Reagan administration, including a freeze on hiring state employees, cutbacks in out-of-state travel and equipment purchase, will be continued in the fiscal year beginning today, but they will be administered at the department level, rather than through the governor's office. Philip N. Battaglia, Reagan's executive secretary, said departments will be given lump sums for salaries and can hire personnel to fit those figures.

Battaglia noted the state government currently is operating with 8 per cent fewer employees than are authorized in the new budget. He said hirings through June 1 were 4,514 less than a year ago, out-of-state travel was down 79 per cent, and equipment purchases for the first three months were down 70 per cent.

Bill Action: The so-called "dognapping" bill, which would make it a felony to steal any dog, was revived in the assembly and, for a time, seemed to be on its way toward approval. But the assembly reconsidered on SB-624—Lagomarsino and sent the measure back to committee. SB1220-Beilenson, which would have given cities and counties the authority to adopt special gun control regulations, was killed by the senate judiciary committee.

AB1548-Veneman, which would have permitted counties to charge fees from boatowners to cover costs of patrol work, was rejected by the assembly. And a bill which would have abolished the state board of dry cleaners, SB338 - Miller, also got the thumbs-down treatment from the assembly.

Governor Reagan, despite statements by fellow governors and comments on his fitness as a potential Republican candidate for President in 1968, maintains he has no aspirations. Reagan said his named is mentioned only because of a "flurry" when he travels out of state, However, in continuing his non-campaign for a non-nomination, Reagan disclosed he will be making a number of fund-raising appearances throughout the country this fall. But this is strictly a matter of party responsibility, Reagan said.

The usual weather in California during the spring months has taken a heavy toll on tree fruit production, the state department of agriculture reported. In addition, much of the harvesting activity of crops such as grapes and tomatoes will be late. This will make them susceptible to damage from early fall rains and will result in a high farm labor demand after Labor Day. The department said the overall tree fruit crop will be down 17 per cent from last year and be 12 per cent below average.

Californians apparently spent less and saved more during the first three months of 1967, the board of equalization reported. Taxable retail sales during the January - March quarter were $7.8 billion, up only 2 per cent from a year ago—the smallest first quarter increase since 1961. New car sales, making up 12 per cent of the total, were off 6.4 per cent, with used car sales down 5.4 per cent. Personal income for the quarted was up 7.7 per cent from a year ago, the board said, but the per capita spending was only $405.53, a drop of $2.53 from a year ago.

Welfare fraud will be considered at a one-day conference called in Sacramento for July 10, by Governor Reagan. Reagon, who will address the group, said the conference will be held to determine just how much fraud there is in the welfare program and what could be done to correct it with both short and long range methods. Invited to attend were representatives of supervisors, district attorneys, welfare associations, and the counties.

DISEASE DEFIES WAR

World Health Officials Fear Major New Cholera Epidemic

By SCIENCE SERVICE

GENEVA — Obscured by the war, rampant cholera still threatens this summer to cross the water from the Middle East to Europe, according to World Health Organization doctors in Geneva.

For American travelers, the problem of self-protection during a trip to Arab lands may now be academic.

But southern and eastern Europe is another matter. The new Seventh Cholera Pandemic resembles the sixth, that ran from 1899 to 1922, and that one blanketed Europe.

"I wouldn't be surprised to hear any day of an outbreak in some rural areas of Europe," says the U. N. medical agency's Director-General, Dr. Marcolino Gomez Candau. "The classical and El Tor forms now exist in endemic form in a vast area between the Pacific and Mediterranean. So, numerous possibilities remain for the further spread. The pattern closely resembles that of past pandemics. It is a real danger."

Cholera has already crossed into a corner of the USSR in the Caucasus. The Russians reported almost 600 cases there. Iran and Iraq have suffered extensive outbreaks during the past two years and cases are unofficially reported in Turkey, Syria, Jordan and elsewhere.

For a long time, epidemiologists assumed that cholera had retreated to its ancient lair in the Ganges delta. Then a new form, El Tor, arose suddenly in Indonesia in August 1961, spread by political refugees from the Celebes riots to Hong Kong, Macao and China, then marched by various routes throughout the Pacific and across the Asian land mass, sweeping 23 countries. El Tor even muscled out the classical form in India, a rare bacteriological feat.

Last year 42,000 cases and 4,000 deaths were reported to WHO, as required by the International Sanitary Regulations. But nations are known to try to keep outbreaks secret, to protect exports and tourism, at least until they are swamped by the disease.

Studies in Taiwan, the Philippines and elsewhere suggest that up to 100 people are infected for each known clinical case. The El Tor variety is more insidious than classical cholera.

Travel is a major problem.

"When cholera enters a region, the highway is a dangerous place," says WHO staff specialist Dr. D. S. Barua. "I remember in '64 how it fanned out from Calcutta and took the roads to Pakistan, Burma and westward. But it's quite capable of traveling by sea, via fishermen and seamen, across the Dardanelles, for instance.

"And it can come by air. Recently a British traveler arrived in Japan from Hong Kong and India with the disease." Japan, which has done an excellent job of wiping out cholera with antibiotics, has a perfect record in recent years, detecting 14 cases entering the country and preventing cholera from establishing a foothold.

Not a single case has been reported in Europe or America, although two Washington technicians have suffered laboratory infections. "So far there has never been a case in Latin America, which is amazing because conditions are favorable there," Dr. Barua says.

"We have heard rumors of cases in sub-Saharan Africa, although a real foothold couldn't be kept secret by a unprepared country. Many Africans do come to Saudi Arabia and mix with Moslem pilgrims from Asia, so there's always a possibility."

All the Middle Eastern countries along the Mediterranean are considered "vulnerable." The UAR and the Sudan have been preparing intensively to control any outbreak.

The most edemic nations continue to be the Philippines, India, Pakistan, Indonesia, Vietnam, and, presumably, China. This year a new outbreak is reported in Cambodia. Most of these countries have the disease all year. The Middle Eastern epidemics occur in summer.

"It always seems to happen around Aug. 15," says Dr. Barua. "We fear that date."

Time Running Out For Hong Kong

By AP NEWSFEATURES

Time is running out for the British crown colony of Hong Kong, no matter what the outcome of China's current campaign to cow it.

The basic fact is that most of the colony's real estate — the New Territories across the harbor from Hong Kong island — is under a 99-year lease from China, a lease that ends just 30 years from now. As things look this year, there is scant chance the lease will be renewed.

Hong Kong is under the same sort of pressure that brought the Portuguese colony of Macao to its knees earlier this year. The British however, have reacted differently. Although there is no question but that Chinese armed forces could overrun the colony out of hand, the British have indicated they will insist on their right to maintain order.

The confrontation stemmed from the arrest of nearly 400 Chinese who rioted in the Kowloon district. Thereafter the Peking government demanded release of the prisoners, punishment for the officials who had put them in custody, and apologies. The British would have none of it.

Their position is far stronger than their physical strength might indicate. Hong Kong buys vast food supplies from China and provides the Peking government with foreign exchange estimated at half a billion dollars or more annually. This is China's main source of hard currency and something that, in all logic, she would not want to do without.

Hong Kong's 20,000 armed police and soldiers have been able to keep under control mobs of the magnitude seen thus far, but probably could do little against a Chinese army.

They guard one of the finest harbors in the world, through which flows $2.6 billion in trade annually. Hong Kong manufactures a great variety of objects, especially clothing and textiles, and is a trading post for the world.

Its booming economy might very well be affected, however, by the hot breath of China's displeasure.

Britain has been doing business at this crossroad for a century and a quarter. She got title to Hong Kong in 1840 after the Opium war in which she established her right, no longer exercised, to trade in the drug.

Too Many In Prison, Retiring Expert Says

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Richard A. McGee, who will retire this fall as administrator of the state youth and adult corrections agency, has recommended that fewer criminals in California be kept in prison and that community-based programs for their rehabilitation be stepped up greatly.

"We are putting too many people in correctional institutions and keeping them there too long," McGee said, in presenting a report on organization of the state correctional services in the control and treatment of crime and delinquency.

McGee said that 44 per cent of the identified offender population in California is incarcerated, while the national average is only about 33 per cent. He said fewer offenders should be committed to institutions, and on a careful, selective basis.

The recommendations called for in McGee's report would shift a great deal of the cost for controlling criminals from the state to the local level. He said a broad tax reform would be required to provide the financing for this for the cities and counties.

Even if the shift from state institutions to local custody is not accomplished, McGee said the state's subsidy for local probation programs should be "vastly expanded" and made more flexible. The subsidy now provides about $5 million in state funds, where nearly $90 million is needed.

Other observations of the report included:

1. State and county correctional services are poorly coordinated with each other and with the closely related state and county services in welfare, renabilitation, health and employment.

2. Criminal and juvenile courts need to be provided with more diagnostic information about offenders.

3. Many jails are overcrowded and poorly staffed because they frequently are over-used to house drunks and other minor offenders who do not really need this kind of detention.

Among the truly distinguished painters currently showing in the finest galleries and salons of Paris, there is a remarkably large and talented group of women. Their pictures cover a wide range of styles and approaches and include nudes, landscapes, fantasies, and still lifes. Some of the styles are expressionistic, others more realistic; none are distinctly feminine in feeling. Together their work offers a good selection for buyers of any taste and preference. All the works are, of course, covered by our Fine Arts Investment Program.

Chinatown Was The Hub Of A Noisy Celebration

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles written by William T. Ortman, early-day San Rafael resident, for the Marin Magazine, recalling events and people of Marin County at the turn of the century.)

By WILLIAM T. ORTMAN

Early 20th century San Rafael celebrated Fourth of July joyfully and noisily.

And nowhere was the celebration louder than in the town's small Chinatown community, centered along C Street between Fourth and Third.

It was the very heart of the patriotic bedlam that gripped Marin's county seat each Independence Day.

THE SMALL Chinese shops, facing C Street, consisted of a row of one-story wooden structures that for some reason had their floor level some three feet below the surface of the sidewalk outside.

At least three of those shops were laundries.

But there were other stores that dealt in such merchandise as silks and satins, highly embroidered clothing, candles, dried fruits and nuts, and what seemed to us Occidentals, mysterious foodstuffs.

THE CHINESE community was the outgrowth of the coolie labor that had been brought to San Rafael for railroad building. That work done, most scattered to other points. But a number remained in San Rafael.

And no one in the town celebrated Independence Day with greater zeal than did these Chinese.

As the Fourth began to draw near, much of the traditional goods sold in the Chinese stores was pushed to one side temporarily to make room for firecrackers, skyrockets, sparklers, bombs, etc.

THE DISTRICT became a principal shopping center for a time with young boys not at all interested in silks or candles.

And when the Fourth dawned, signaled in San Rafael by the crash of cannons fired from the marshland east of First and B streets, Chinatown became the one area that contributed most to the din that erupted and continued throughout the day.

Chinese merchants, their families and their customers made the street ring with the sound of exploding gunpowder.

MANY A storekeeper, it was suspected, shot off more of his holiday goods himself than he sold.

The Chinese especially enjoyed attaching six-foot strings of a thousand firecrackers to a pole in front of their stores, then lighting the bottom end of the string.

When two or more Chinese store proprietors did this simultaneously, the sputtering, cracking, rattling, hissing and banging that resulted was a joy for small boys to behold and hear.

NO WONDER nearby residents pulled down their windows, or found diversions at the other end of town.

The Chinese merchants, however, were not the only dispensers of fireworks to San Rafael's population of the turn of the century.

A major competitor was Dick Martin and his brothers who in their grocery and produce store at Fourth and D placed annually on display a great variety of Fourth of July goods.

IN THE WEST End, there was Emile Lavosia's large, two-story, box-like store building at I and Fourth. The two windows fronting on Fourth were not generally used for display purposes. They served, instead, to admit light to the store.

But for the Fourth, Emile moved two wooden racks to the windows and piled these high with a huge assortment of firecrackers and pyrotechnics for night display.

WHEN the citizens of turn-of-the-century San Rafael marked Independence Day on July 4, the center of activity was the community's small Chinatown. There it was that fireworks were sold. And the Chinese were their own best customers, joining and even leading the din. The cover drawing and sketch below are by Paul R. Miller.

His business had served residents of San Rafael west of F Street. But it was now in a decline. Emile, himself, spent most of his time in his chair in front of the store, watching the ranch wagons passing to and from town. Mrs. Lavosia, although hampered by arthritis, carried on the business, after the grown children had left home — one daughter to tour the world as an opera singer.

YET ANOTHER business man who took part in supplying San Rafael with the necessities for a proper and loud observance of the Fourth of July was the aging Tom Burke who operated his store on "lower Fourth" across from the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. depot.

Ordinarily his small store stocked groceries, notions, school books and stationary. On national and religious holidays he added greeting cards and appropriate pictures.

But Fourth of July was his big day. And as it approached, he displayed firecrackers, pinwheels, Roman candles, skyrockets and sparklers in profusion.

HIS STORE served what was then called "the broad gauge district." While Tom was growing old and his eyesight was failing, he nevertheless mustered the energy each year to make his contribution to the proper observance of America's Independence Day.

Patriotism, more than profit, must have been his motive.

Indicative of this was an event that occurred in 1910.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT was President, and it was a year of financial panic. Many people found themselves without money to buy the necessities of life. President Roosevelt ordered issued paper script in lieu of legal tender. But Californians were unused to any medium of exchange except metal coins. And trade marts in the state refused to accept the "Roosevelt coupons."

Tom Burke was an exception. Patriotic if not practical, he felt it his duty to accept the governmental IOUs in his store. Word got around, and a run resulted. Script-holders soon cleaned out his little store of goods. There were fewer hungry people in San Rafael that night — but Tom Burke was in financial trouble of his own.

The old storekeeper discovered that his wholesalers and commission merchants would not accept the "Roosevelt paper." He had to close his doors.

TOM BURKE passed on a few years later, not one bit richer in the world's goods than the day he entered it. But it seemed to me, somehow, that his patriotism symbolized the true meaning of the Fourth of July as much, if not more, than the noise, pageantry and feasting with which others marked the occasion.

But all of this was part of Independence Day in an earlier San Rafael — exploding fireworks, throngs of visitors from other Marin County points, Sheriff Billy Taylor riding his prancing Arabian horse as the parade's grand marshal, marching military bands from the Presidio, the military academy cadets in uniform, the firemen in red shirts and helmets — and finally a feast of barbecued beef and Spanish beans for all.

Just who are the folk dancers?

They come, answers Dean Linscott, folk dancing enthusiast and teacher, from all the walks of life.

"They're just about the most diversified group imaginable," he claims.

THEIR RANKS include architects and teachers, housewives and secretaries, carpenters and chemists, gardeners and photographers.

Linscott, himself, teaches at the University of California Medical School in San Francisco as an assistant professor of microbiology.

There are single men and women and there are married couples active in the folk dancing clubs.

BUT ONE thing, Linscott says, they all have in common — a love of music.

"People who respond to rhythm find authentic folk music and dancing irresistible," he asserts.

Folk dancing, he continues, has a social as well as recreational appeal to people. "Folk dancers," he claims, "are the friendliest of people. They form social groups and friendships that last through the years."

YET ANOTHER point of appeal for folk dancing is the contribution it makes to physical fitness.

"There is no better exercise than a lively polka," Linscott declares.

Linscott recalls that he was exposed to folk dancing and folk dancers at an early age, his parents having started the first folk dancing class in the Bakehsfield area. But it wasn't until he started to junior college in that city that he became "really hooked" on folk dancing.

WHEN HE went on to the University of California at Los Angeles, he found himself dancing regularly five nights a week over a period of two years.

After military service, he returned to UCLA for graduate studies. There he married. Naturally, he had met wife Nancy at a folk dance class.

The two joined an exhibition folk dance troupe, the Gandy Dancers, an affiliation they continued until they moved to Miami in 1960 where Linscott put in two years at post-graduate study.

IN FLORIDA, they found to their dismay, there was then no organized folk dancing in their area. But ethnic social clubs offered a solution. So they joined frequently in the dances held by a Polish club.

They returned to California and to San Diego. Linscott did two years of post-doctoral research at the famed Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation. But he found time from his studies to organize, with friends, the Cygany Dancers.

A high point for that group was a two-hour public recital consisting of 35 dances from 11 countries.

AFTER ACCEPTING the teaching position at the U. C. Medical School, Linscott moved his family to Mill Valley in June of 1965.

He found that there were three types of folk dance organizations in Marin: The workshop, where folk dancing was taught; the party club, that gave a party once a month, but offered no teaching; and the club that both taught and conducted party nights.

Linscott felt there was a need for a club that would not only offer its membership instruction along with dancing for fun, but would also work toward becoming an exhibition and demonstration group.

HE SOUGHT and received the support of the Marin Dance Council, which was eager for an exhibition group to perform at its own annual festival in July and to fulfill requests for folk dancing demonstrations received from outside organizations

The first problem — a hall — was solved when Dean Linscott obtained the sponsorship of the Mill Valley Recreation Department and the use of the Mill Valley Recreation Center on Monday nights.

The next hurdle was equipment and records, for every folk dance teacher needs his own portable public address system and record files. Linscott began shopping.

PUBLICITY announcing the new group and class was received through the newspapers, posters and word-of-mouth by the folk dancers.

When the first session was held, Linscott found his group consisted of a mixture of experienced and beginning dancers. He solved that problem by teaching new beginner dances, with the emphasis upon Balkan dances, and at the same time stressing styling and background information on those dances that some of the group already knew.

He invited guest teachers who had specialized in ethnic dances to further enrich the sessions.

THE GROUP decided to call themselves the Kopachka Dancers.

Work on exhibition performances has been somewhat slower to develop than Linscott had hoped. But the Kopachkas are now working in that direction.

At the Mountain Play last year, the Kopachka Dancers performed the Reinlander, a Norwegian folk dance.

IT WILL BE one of three dances that Linscott will teach next Saturday at an institute to be held at 1 p.m. at the Park School auditorium in Mill Valley as a new feature of the Marin Dance Council's annual Folk Dance Festival. Bernice Schram of Novato will teach another three dances.

The festival will continue that evening when the folk dancers will gather at the Park School at 7:30 o'clock for an hour of Balkan dancing, followed by general folk dancing until midnight.

On Sunday, July 9, the festival will move to the College of Marin in Kentfield, with dancing beginning on the college campus lawn at 1:30 p.m. In the evening, starting at 7:30, there will be further dancing and exhibitions indoors in the college gym.

THE KOPACHKA Dancers will perform an English country dance Sunday evening.

There is no admission charge for festival events, and spectators are welcome.

Linscott says he is often asked where he has learned the dances he now teaches to others.

"From a variety of sources," he says. "Some from informal sessions with ethnic friends, some from Folk Dance Federation sponsored institutes, and some from one of the four nationally recognized folk dance camps held in California each summer."

HE ATTENDED a 1967 camp at Mendocino this past month.

The ease with which students can master a dance depends, according to Linscott, upon the tempo, the steps, and the number of patterns involved.

Thus a single-patterned Balkan dance can be learned in five minutes by 90 per cent of the dancers.

ON THE OTHER hand, the Kopachka Dancers have been working on a Polish kujawiak for three months.

A major problem confronting the folk dance teacher, Linscott says, is class attrition. Dancers move away, or, for various reasons, find themselves unable to continue their club activities. Thus, there is a continuing need for "new blood."

As a result, Linscott is planning a new class on the beginner level that will start July 13 at the Mill Valley Golf Course Clubhouse, also under Mill Valley Recreation auspices.

THIS NEW group will concentrate on learning the dancesthe already mastered by the Kopachkas.

The new club will mean yet another evening of his time that Dean Linscott will be devoting to folk dancing. Already many of his hours away from teaching go to that interest — rehearsing for exhibitions, attending the meetings of folk dance organizations, teaching, and just dancing with other folk dance clubs throughout the Bay Area.

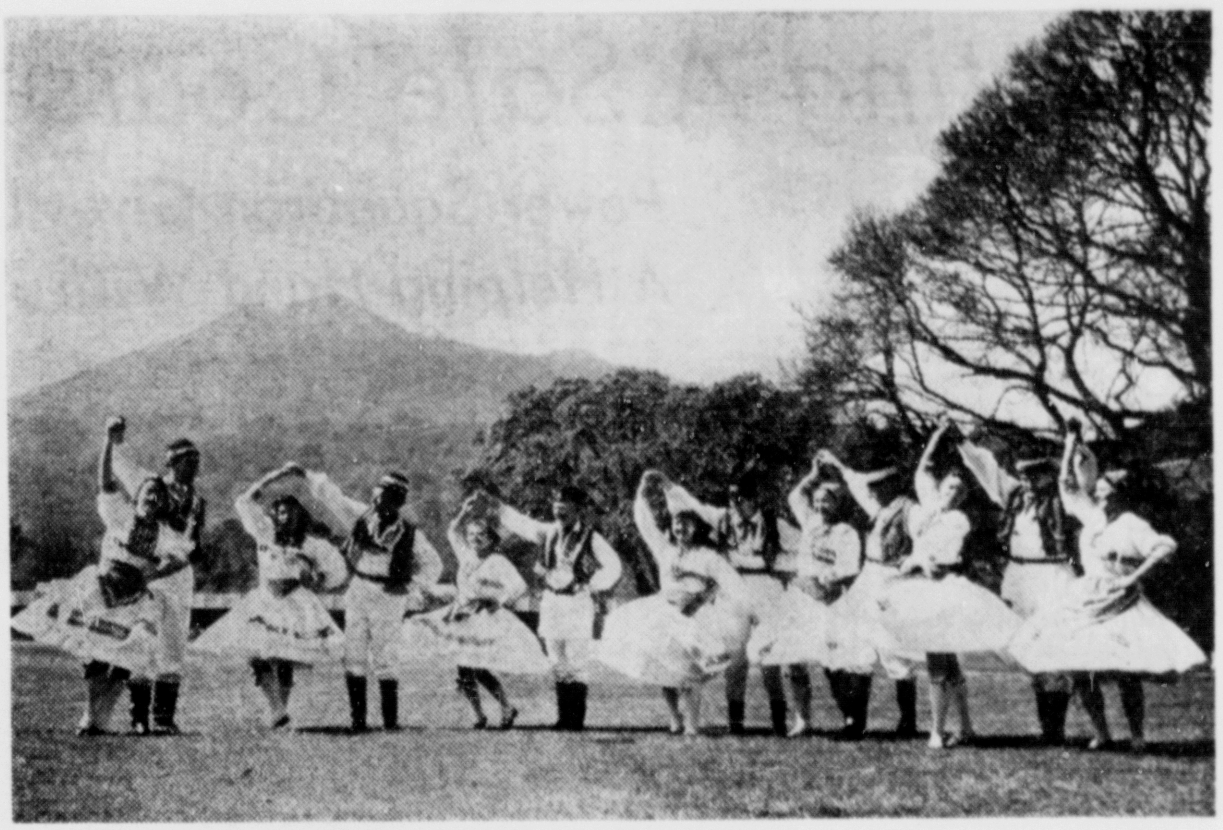
Nancy shares that schedule. And in her job as a teacher at Richardson Bay School in Sausalito, she has found herself introducing seventh and eighth graders to the joys of folk dancing.

THE LINSCOTTS have two sons, Kevin, 11, and Russell, 7.

A family interest, second to folk dancing, is camping.

So the Linscotts will be spending a part of this summer vacation in the High Sierra with two other families.

Need it be said that those friends are also folk dancing families?



IN COLORFUL Croatian costumes, the Kopachka Dancers, taught by Dean Linscott, go through a dance. They'll perform an English country dance at the Marin Dance Council's Folk Dance Festival next weekend.

A HIGH LEAP being practiced by Dean Linscott and students for a performance of the Polish kujawiak demonstrates why folk dancing is one excellent means of attaining and retaining physical fitness. (Photos by Fred Sweger)

"Did My Cleaner Use Water And Stain My Draperies?"

No, it is most unlikely that he used water to clean your drapes. The probability is that the water stain was there before cleaning. Soil may have hidden it.

There are unrealized circumstances which cause water stain on drapes such as leaving a window open and having rain pass through; spillage of water when watering a nearby plant, a leaky radiator or even the condensation of moisture around the window area. Any of these could make water stains on your draperies.

Draperies are exposed to light more than other home fabrics which, with various forms of heat from heating systems, will oxidize water stains, forming a brown "water mark." The brown ring is not merely water, but a combination of substances due to the oxidation which has taken place. Your drycleaner may be able to reduce this stain somewhat, but complete removal is seldom possible without damage to the drape itself.

Charting A Safe Course For The Boater

Power Squadron Gives Uncle Sam A Helping Hand With A Vital Job

By DON KEOWN

Accurate, up-to-date charts are as essential to today's navigator as the engines or sails that power his boat.

Responsibility for the maintenance of river, lake and coastal charts in this country falls upon the U.S. Department of Commerce's Environmental Science Services Administration and its Coast and Geodetic Survey teams, with headquarters in Rockville, Md.

And it is a tremendous undertaking.

THERE IS THE checking of harbor facilities—is fresh water available? Gasoline? Showers? Boat launching ramps? Electricity? Restaurant? Groceries?

There is the channel to be surveyed for depth and for markings, for lights, for obstructions and their visibility.

Shoreline landmark changes must be duly recorded.

IT INVOLVES watching, surveying, sounding, measuring and reams and reams of paper work.

It involves, too, millions of dollars of public funds.

After the survey work has been completed, mile by mile, there still remains the gigantic task of transferring the collected information first to a working chart, then to a master chart.

EACH AND every change must be noted, verified and submitted to the Department of Commerce, which attempts to issue charts for all areas on an every eight or 10-month basis.

Small wonder, then, that the paid federal employees assigned to the huge project found themselves swamped and falling hopelessly behind in their work.

Some charts would appear from six to 10 times, sometimes more, without a change. And in this fast-changing age there is a constant shifting and turnover, both in the water and along its edges.

(Photos by Phil Strick)

IN DESPERATION, the Department of Commerce looked for help—and found it.

The national commander of the United States Power Squadrons was invited to Washington, D.C. where the problem of the antequated charts was presented to him.

It was suggested that the 50-year-old educational boating organization, with 350 squadrons and 65,000 members throughout the country, might like to make yet another contribution to safe boating by contributing its knowledge, experience and craft to the cause of nautical charting.

THE PROPOSAL was that squadron members undertake to update each and every chart covering our national waterways.

The national commander accepted the challenge, and from that sprang what has been designated as the Cooperative Charting Program.

Bay Area waters have been designated as District 25 of the nationwide program. Responsibility for the charting of the area has been assigned to nine United States Power Squadrons—Santa Clara, Sequoia, San Francisco, Carquinez, Sacramento, Peralta, Oakland, Diablo and Marin.

EACH HAS ITS own specific assignment. For the Marin squadron it is to chart between Point Reyes and Petaluma Creek along Marin's shoreline and inner waterways.

Lt. Allen K. Kennett of Corte Madera has been designated cooperative charting chairman for the squadron, which is headed by Commander George T. Swift of San Rafael.

Serving on the charting committee are Edward J. Masonic of Corte Madera, Albert MacCarthy of Mill Valley, Lt. Richard G. McDonald of San Rafael, Richard Hollingsworth of Corte Madera, and Lt. Cmdr. Peter Pike of Ross.

EACH OF THESE men has been assigned his own sectional responsibility.

Kinnett, working with Pike, in addition to organizing the overall program, took over the task of re-charting the Richardson Bay area. Their work to date has already provided 32 reports disclosing many previously unnoted changes. Consequently, the 1967 charts already are a vast improvement in accuracy over their predecessors.

In the Strawberry Cove area, so radical were the changes in conditions that the men had to resort to hand-drawn charts.

MASONIC WAS assigned to the San Rafael Canal and so brilliantly did he perform his charting duties that the Marin squadron has been notified by Capt. Lorne G. Taylor, chief of the Marine Chart Division of the U.S. Department of Commerce, that it has been awarded 26 credit units toward a 1967 Cooperative Charting Award, instead of the usual one point for a finished job.

"The shoaling in San Rafael Channel reported by you is of a critical nature and directly affects the safety of navigation in the area," Captain Taylor wrote. He added that an analysis of the new information will be followed by appropriate action.

So intensified were Masonic's studies that he had to draw his own large-scale charts to show the wealth of detail he had uncovered. In some areas where charts had shown eight feet of water at minus tide, his soundings, taken over periods of many hours, now showed less than two feet of water.

HE COVERED facilities and services available to yachtsmen and the location of aids to navigation with the same care and precision.

Richard T. Hollingsworth undertook the checking of the area from Corte Madera Creek to Paradise Cay at Tiburon and completed that job. Lt. Cmdr. Dick Boss of Kentfield charted the Marin Yacht Harbor.

Latest to complete his part of the program was McDonald who has now submitted his report for Gallinas Creek.

THE SQUADRON has developed the technique of combining pleasure and charting cruises. Thus, in August, when the squadron makes a bay cruise, one boat will be manned by a Cooperative Charting Program team that will devote itself to observations on behalf of that project.

In September, the squadron will hold its annual Drake's Bay Cruise. From his After-You, Allen Kennett, relieved of skippering responsibilities by Art Irvin, will concentrate upon charting.

The After-You, Masonic's Lil Beaver and McDonald's RigStad have been the three key boats in carrying out the program to date.

IT IS A program, the squadron recognizes, that will have to be a continuing one, if it is to be effective. For the bay, the shore and the channels will continue to change.

But there are rewards for the many hours of work.

For instance, they can cite the small craft flag which had been re-positioned 12 years ago—but the change had never been shown on the charts until their survey work brought it to the federal government's attention.

AND WHEN a craft sank just off the Marin shoreline, Marin Power Squadron members were on hand immediately to pinpoint the location so that the sunken boat would not claim some hapless mariner unaware of what lurked beneath the water's surface.

Safe Boating Week will be observed in Marin and nationally next week. The power squadron has long contributed to that cause with its free courses in seamanship. But the Cooperative Charting Program marks yet another contribution to that cause—and an important one.

Captain Taylor of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey has appraised the program to date as follows:

"THE CURRENT program with the United States Power Squadrons has already resulted in significant updating of charts . . . an important factor in safety afloat for all watercraft."

This holiday weekend — the Fourth of July weekend—traditionally marks the zenith of the cruising-sailing season for the Bay Area.

No small part of the enjoyment and safety of the participating skippers, crews and passengers can be attributed to the updated chart information provided by the power squadron members.

The Military Woods—

Generations Have Served Uncle Sam

LT. COL. Oliver E. Wood, stationed at Fort Baker on Marin's shoreline, comes from a military family, grandson and son of Army officers, father of a Navy officer. In going through Fort Baker's historical files he came upon the photograph at right and recognized in it his father, the late Norton Wood (arrow), then a young lieutenant. Among Colonel Wood's own possessions are original copies of a West Point Academy scrapbook compiled by his grandfather, later Brig. Gen. Oliver E. Wood, in the 1860's, and later published as a book. Illustrations from it are reprinted on pages M10 and M11. (U.S. Army photos)

On June 28, 1865, Cadet Oliver E. Wood, class of '67, began to gather material for a West Point scrapbook — cartoons, anecdotes, songs, poems and legends concerning life at the United States Military Academy.

By the time Cadet Wood — later Brigadier General Wood — was graduated, he had produced three volumes inscribed in the decorative penmanship of that era.

THE BOOKS were illustrated with drawings, cartoons and caricatures by Cadet Wood. Much of the written material he had authored himself, his schoolmates contributing the remainder.

In 1871, the firm of D. Van Nostrand of New York published the major portion of the collection in a bound volume of some 400 pages with wood engravings of the original illustrations. It was titled "A West Point Scrap Book."

Today the three handwritten scrapbooks and the printed Van Nostrand edition are the cherished possessions of Cadet Wood's grandson, Lt. Col. Oliver E. Wood, a West Pointer himself and now assistant chief of staff, Intelligence, at Headquarters, 6th Region US Army Air Defense Command, at Fort Baker on Marin's Golden Gate shoreline.

IT IS QUITE evident from reading Cadet Wood's scrapbooks that in some areas life at the military academy in those days was more lenient, in others far more austere.

A cadet's day,for instance, started with the morning gun at 5 o'clock and a drum tap began simultaneously with the gun report and continued for the few minutes allowed the cadet to get up, dress and make a roll call formation.

Inspection of quarters was at 5:30; thus it is apparent that a cadet had to hustle or pick up a few demerits.

After inspection came a period of study and at 7 o'clock, another roll call, this one for breakfast. It was a "must" unless a cadet had already made the surgeon's, or sick call, at 6:30.

CLASSES WERE from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., bracketing dinner. Then came drill and a short period of recreation before dress parade at sundown and supper. Another half hour was spent in recreation and then it was studying, or "boning," until tattoo at 9:30.

The Woods Have Served Their Country For Four Generations

Taps was blown at 10 o'clock.

The academy's demerit system was discussed at length in Cadet Wood's scrapbook. In 1864, 200 demerits in one year meant dismissal. This was later changed with 100 in six months bringing expulsion.

THE NUMBER of demerits meted out depended, of course, upon the seriousness of the offense.

Eight or 10 would be given for "disobedience of orders," "mutinous (sic!) conduct" or "sitting or lying on post as sentinel."

For "trifling in ranks" a cadet could receive four demerits and for being late for formation or having his blouse unbuttoned, one.

The names of cadets receiving demerits and the details of their offenses were read loud and clear by the cadet adjutant each day at sundown, or retreat, formation and then posted.

OTHER PUNISHMENTS to which the cadets were liable, in addition to expulsion, were suspension for one year, extra guard duty, confinement to quarters and time in a "light" or "dark" prison.

It is interesting, if hardly surprising, to note that out of 121 entering the academy in 1863, only 63 were graduated. Most of those washing out were "found deficient on math" or "on demerits."

The major portion of the three volumes of the original scrapbooks compiled by Cadet Wood treats with lighter subjects in both prose and rhyme.

A DESCRIPTION of a theatrical presentation in the Fencing Academy in December, 1866, entitled "The Melancholy Drama of Lend Me Five Shillings," and the humorous account of Cadet Wood's first class in horsemanship, when the cadets were compelled to ride without stirrups to strengthen thighs and knees, are examples.

"There is scarcely a third classmen who does not go walking around like a pair of dividers," Cadet Wood wrote succinctly after his first stirrupless experience.

An article entitled "A Citizen's Idea of Dress Parade" pokes fun at unknowledgeable civilians, while another, "My First Night on Post," describes the hazing of a plebe by upper classmen.

AT THE END of his first handwritten volume, Cadet Wood added a list of words and phrases that made up the vocabulary used by the cadets of those days.

New cadets were known as reptiles, animals or beasts. A "fast animal" was a lower classman "who put on airs" and a "rabid beast" was an impertinent plebe.

"To bugle it" was to manage to keep from reciting until a bugle call announced the end of classes. "To fess" was to make a poor recitation, and "to fess perfectly frigid" meant to know nothing at all about a lesson. "To max it" meant then, as it does now, to make a perfect recitation.

SOME TWO years before Cadet Wood began his scrapbook, he was an enlisted man with the 1st Connecticut Cavalry Squadron (Volunteers). At the Second Battle of Bull Run his squadron had fought a bitter rear guard action to help save the Union Army and its baggage trains on its retreat towards Washington.

After the fighting was done, the remnants of the rear guard were assembled. Someone, they were told, wanted to talk to them.

The figure who approached their ranks was tall, gaunt, black-clad and familiar to all of them. He spoke quietly and somberly and the men strained to catch his words. He told the assembled troopers that because of their gallantry at Bull Run "the Union Army shall live to fight again."

THEN HE added: "Any men who are under 22 and desire a Presidential appointment to West Point, step forward."

Oliver Wood promptly moved one step closer to his commander-in-chief, President Abraham Lincoln.

The Regular Army dwindled sharply following the Civil War.

Oliver Wood remained a first lieutenant for 20 years, which was not at all an exceptional happening in those days when promotions were made at unit level and only when a vacancy occurred within the unit.

THEN, AS a result of the rapid expansion of the Army in 1898 at the start of the Spanish-American War, he was promoted to brigadier general within 18 months. He served in Cuba, 1898-1899, as quartermaster-general for another Wood, a distant relative, Gen. Leonard E. Wood, later to become Army chief of staff.

During the period 1902-1904, Brig. Gen. Oliver E. Wood was senior US Army attache at the US Embassy in Japan, but spent most of his time as an observer with the Japanese Army in Manchuria during the Russo-Japanese War. He witnessed many major engagements and after the war published a book, "From Yalu to Port Arthur."

While General Wood was in Manchuria, his wife stayed in Japan, helping the Red Cross organize there, and serving as official hostess for the American Embassy in Tokyo.

WHEN WEST POINT Cadet Oliver E. Wood, class of 1867, decided to compile a scrapbook on life at the academy, he did his own drawings and cartoons. Much of it, and the articles as well, lampooned the military academy, himself and his fellow cadets. Wood went on to become a brigadier general. Today the original scrapbooks, and a bound volume printed by D. Van Nostrand, publishers, with wood engravings of Oliver E. Wood's original illustrations, are the property of the general's grandson, another Oliver E. Wood, also a career army officer, and now stationed at Fort Baker in Marin. The artwork on these pages is taken from the grandfather's scrapbook. Above, a bit of fun poked at the ballroom graces as practiced at the Point. Below, one way of spending confinement, one of the penalties for excessive demerits. At upper right and bottom right, Wood's account of the outcome of his first class in horsemanship. And bottom center, some satirical comment upon the rigors of academy classroom work.

West Point 100 Years Ago

How One Cadet Saw Funny Side

Col. Norton E. Wood, was in the San Francisco Bay Area with a 16-inch Coast Artillery regiment. He had volunteered for Army service upon graduation from New York's Columbia University, spent two years as an enlisted man in the Philippines during the Insurrection, and received a Regular Army appointment as a "shavetail" in 1902.

Col. Norton Wood also had an embassy assignment during his Army career — in Madrid. When he returned to the States in 1914, he was the proud owner of a gift from Spain's King Alphonso, a pure-bred Arabian stallion.

The monarch's own mount had bolted during field maneuvers and the young American officer had brought the animal under control at the risk of his own neck.

THE PRESENT Oliver E. Wood attended the military academy at West Point from 1935 to 1939 and by coincidence shared quarters with a Cadet Rogers who bore the same surname as did General Wood's room-mate back in 1865 — although there was no relationship between the two.

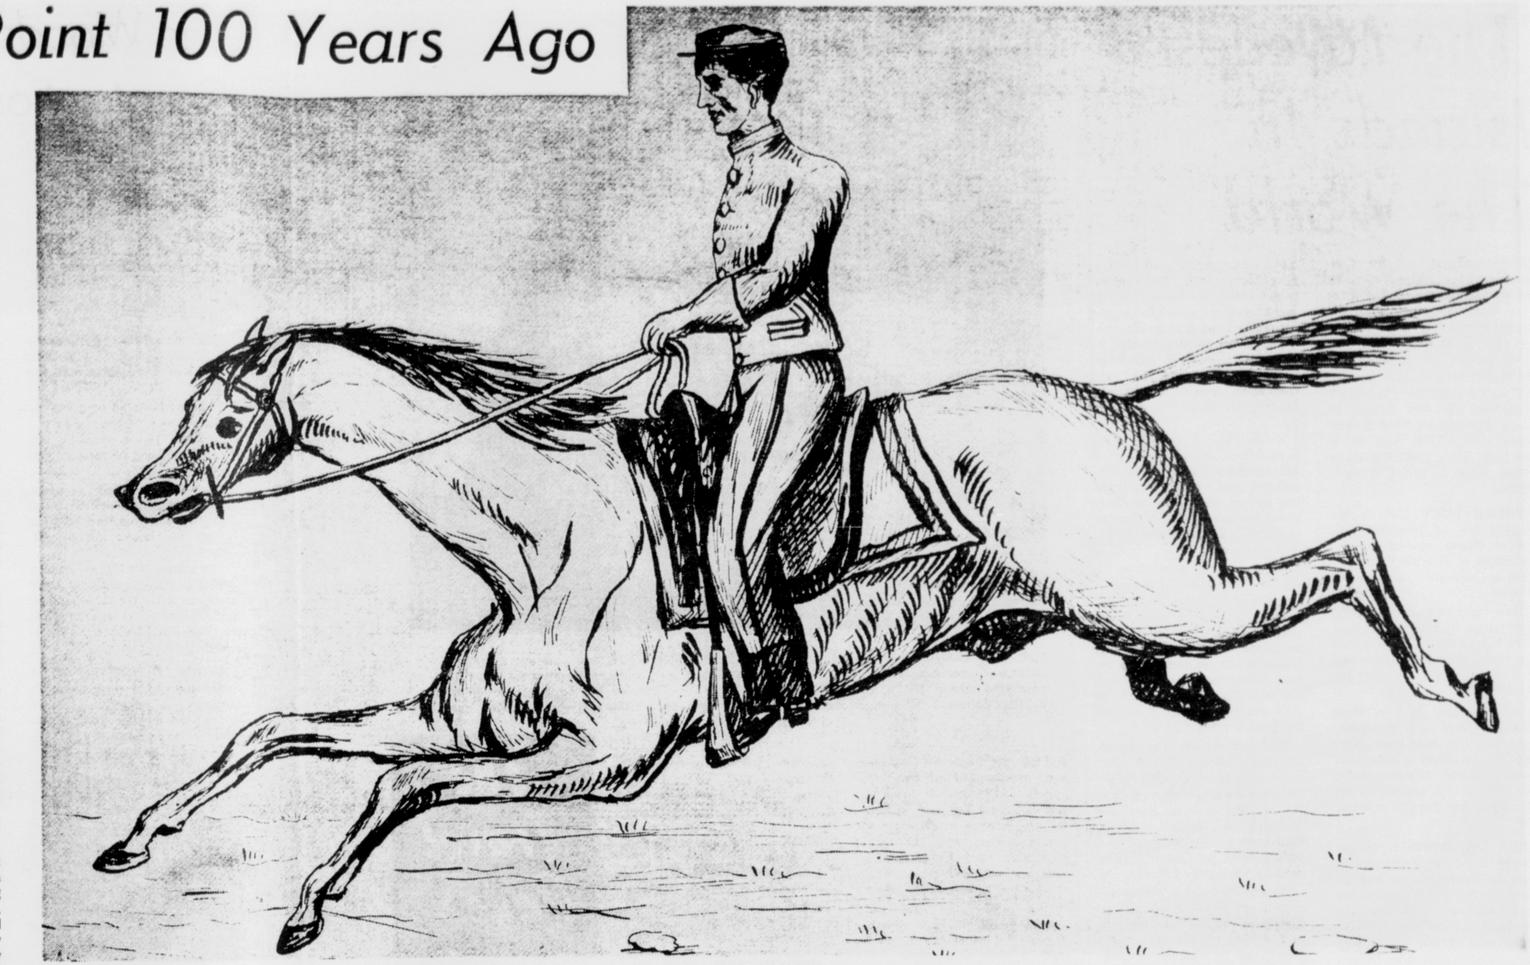
Colonel Wood, as with all Army officers, had his modicum of routine assignments following graduation from the academy, but the tempo, of course, picked up considerably in the early 1940s. During and immediately after World War II he served successively in Mindoro, P. I., in Luzon with the Philippine Scouts, and in Okinawa.

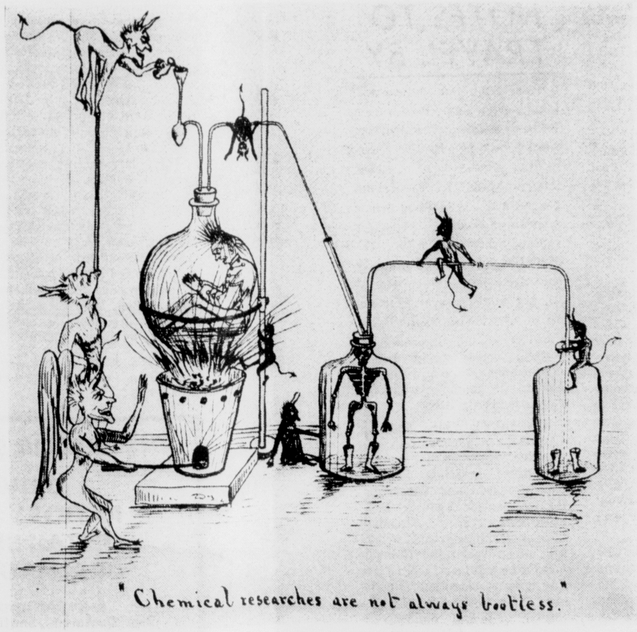
Then following assignments in the Pentagon, Korea, Paris, interspersed with air defense tours, first in California, then New Jersey, and then back to California, he came to Fort Baker where his father had helped to emplace the giant 16-inch guns in the early 1900s.

LOOKING THROUGH an historical file at Fort Baker recently, Colonel Wood found a 1904 picture of his father as a young lieutenant seated atop of the huge Coast Artillery piece as it was being mounted.

Colonel Wood, retiring this summer, plans to attend school on the West Coast and take up teaching as his "retirement" career.

Very soon now, an Ensign Oliver E. Wood, Jr., will report to his ship in Bremerton, Wash., bound for combat duty in the Vietnam area. He is Brigadier General Wood's great-grandson, who broke a family tradition by volunteering for the Navy upon receiving his Master's Degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1966. After graduation from Navy Officer's Candidate School he was selected to attend the Navy Diving and Salvage Schools in Norfolk, Va., and Anacostia, Md.





'The Loveliest' Islands In The World'

FOR THE TRAVELER in quest of beauty, quiet and charming sights, the Gulf Islands, sprawled along the Strait of Georgia in British Columbia, have become an irresistible target. You can eat oysters off the beaches, stroll through the fields, or enjoy such sights as Darleene Marcotte, a fourth generation Ganges resident, and her frisky charge.

James Fitzpatrick, the California producer of more than 300 movie travelogues, called them "the loveliest islands in the world" and built a summer home on one of British Columbia's Gulf Islands as proof of his belief.

World traveler Fitzpatrick discovered his Gulf Islands 20 years ago and felt as if he had found a new land, just as so many do when they first come across these beautiful, tranquil islands.

THERE THEY LIE in the eastern lee of massive Vancouver Island, strewn through the Strait of Georgia from Victoria to Nanaimo in a sprawling triangle.

They can also be seen looming deep purple through the sea haze from Vancouver, 18 miles across the Strait. But it is astonishing how little they are known to the outside world.

But those that do know them also love them with the intensity that the landsman often feels for an island, a passion of possession and a sense of belonging to a very special way of life which they can find nowhere else.

BUT THE WORD is getting around, the visitors are coming from far distant places, and the boats are tied up at night at the small family-type marinas have registrations from Manitoba and Texas and Illinois and many, many from California, Oregon and Washington.

The cars, although still relatively few on the gravel roads, can be from Ontario and New York and Idaho and Arkansas.

And yet these islands are as old, as time is measured on the west coast of Canada, for they were discovered by the first Spanish captains, Navarez and Eliza, sailing their tiny naval schooners up from Mexico in 1791.

THE GREAT English explorer, Capt. George Vancouver, arrived in 1792 and naval explorations and commerce continued sporadically. But as a result, many of the islands, bays, headlands, straits and channels have Spanish names or can be found in the records of the British Navy in the names of ships, officers and ranks.

The largest islands — Salt Spring, Gabriola, Mayne, North and South Pender, Saturna — were settled more than a century ago by disgruntled gold miners, Americans and Englishmen, who toppled the soaring forests and hacked out stump forms and generally lived a hard life.

The farms became larger, orchards flourished, fishermen clustered in sheltered bays, and tradesmen arrived, but the islands never found true prosperity.

There is now a majority of retired folk from distant cities, a salt-and-peppering of artists, painters and writers who found the peace and pace to their liking, and also a goodly number of those who up and quit the city rat race.

While tourism boomed in the rest of the Pacific Northwest, it languished for years in the Gulf Islands because of poor ferry service. It was the curse of the hundreds of non-islanders who had summer cottages, and a secret satisfaction to most Islanders who wanted the islands to stay exactly as they were—off the beaten track.

That is over now. The British Columbia Ferry Authority has taken over all the existing routes and now has a fast modern service into the Islands, from the Tsawwassan Terminal south of Vancouver on the mainland and from Swartz Bay north of Victoria on Vancouver Island.

The one-shot visitor can spend a pleasant day aboard one of these fine ferries, putting into small village wharves on several islands, or he can get a long-range view of the islands as the big Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay car ferries pass every hour across the Strait, through scenic Active Pass and then down Swanson Channel. Either trip is a chance to see a vacationland that has only recently been touched by the onrushing tide of tourism.

MANY VISITORS select an island and drive off the ferry on its morning run and spend the day in another world — a world of quiet, tree-shaded lanes which skirt old orchards and uphill pastures where tiny deer often graze with cattle and sheep.

The visitors take a swim in the quiet waters of a sandy bay, eat a picnic lunch, and drop in at one of the old falsefronted general stores beside a dock where they still sell kerosene and scythes and rock salt and where the islanders gather to gossip. Time moves slowly in these islands.

Accommodation on the main islands ranges from excellent to adequate.

ON SALT SPRING, the largest and the only island with a liquor store and cocktail bar, there are motels which are as good as any in British Columbia. There are also resorts which cater to families, even unto the third generation, and their patrons love their surroundings as rustic as possible, without being inadequate.

Smaller islands have resorts where the visitor can spend a night, a week, or a season.

The Islands are not in the forefront of the movement to make the tourist forget that he ever left home. The independence of the islander shows in the accommodation they provide —good, substantial, but not too many fancy frills.

FOR THE BOATING family, no place in North America can compare to the Gulf Islands. That statement can be made unequivocally.

A family can cruise for two weeks among these islands, stopping at a different village every night, or drop anchor in a new bay each evening, and never feel crowded.

Although about 10,000 American boats pass through the U. S. Customs each year, there is never the slightest feeling of crowding. The sight of a sail against a distant shore or the mutter of a boat engine far down the strait is often the only other contact with civilization in a long day.

BRITISH Columbians — probably as boat-happy a people as anywhere in North America— also swarm to the islands in the summer and in spring and autumn weekends, but you'd never know it. There is just too much vacationland, and yet in the tiny villages with their government wharves, marinas, general store and cluster of houses, are never far away, just an hour or two of cruising.

The islands lie amid one of the world's finest salmon fishing areas, and there is nothing to compare with a coho barbecued on a beach.

In a few minutes, even a novice should be able to catch a meal of rock cod or sea perch over a reef or beside a kelp bed.

OYSTERS ARE almost embarrassingly plentiful on every rock at low tide and the beaches are clam diggers' heavens. In season, there are wild strawberries and blackberries and tiny, hard and delicious apples from abandoned orchards, and the Islanders sell fruit and vegetables from their gardens.

The islands lie in their own biotic zone and if an old timer tells you he grows figs, he's not kidding you. He does, and other exotic-type fruits, too.

Paradise has its drawbacks, however, and the one which irritates most visitors is the shortage of waterfront land.

AFTER THEIR first vacation they immediately think of owning a cottage on some headland and watching the sunsets over Vancouver Island. Several years ago, the British Columbia government slapped an embargo on the sale of government land in the islands in order to preserve it as a vast park-like area. This consequently forced the price of waterfront land up and up and up, and lucky is he who now owns an acre or two overlooking a quiet bay, ringed by fir and arbutus trees.

Nine times out of 10, he who is so lucky will have been one of those who also discovered the islands years ago, and staked out his summertimes on it for years to come.

Seven Flags On Weekend Tour For Marinites

Marinites can spend an historic weekend in their own southern Redwood Empire retracing nearly four centuries under seven flags.

They can start with the White Ensign of England, whipped aloft here in 1579 by that globe-girdling freebooter, Francis Drake. The bearded captain claimed California for Queen Elizabeth I when refitting his "Golden Hinde" for the Pacific crossing on the sands of western Marin County.

The spot generally accepted as his careenage is in the sweeping bight of Point Reyes, at Drake's Estero, or Drake's Bay. It is marked by a stone cross. The beach is gently sloping, and great for wading.

This historic site is now included in the new Point Reyes National Seashore.

THE NEXT "FLAG" to investigate is that of Russia.

Yes, the czar's minions once ruled California's redwood coast from a rough stockade at Fort Ross, 10 miles north of where the Russian River meets the Pacific. It's restored now, and little more than an hour's drive north of Point Reyes Station, on twisting State Route 1.

A distinctive Slavic chapel and authentic museum dominate the scene. Admission is a quarter, with youngsters 18 or under free when accompanied by an adult.

PROBABLY THIS is enough historic sight-seeing for one day.

A pleasant summer stop is in one of the resort towns that line the Russian River, to the south: Duncan's Mills, Monte Rio, Guerneville, or Rio Nido. There are fine restaurants and numerous motels; also a redwood forest to visit at Armstrong Grove. Here are majestic trees 2,000 years old and 300 feet tall.

Tasting rooms of hospitable Korbel Winery are just east of Rio Nido.

NEXT DAY'S "flag stops" are in the eastern end of Sonoma County. Take State Highway 12 through Santa Rosa and down the lovely Valley of the Moon. Stop at the estate of that totally-American novelist, Jack London, whose home is a state park in the gentle hills of Glen Ellen.

If you use your Fort Ross admission ticket on the same day, it's good at Jack London State Park.

Visit London's simple grave (he died here in 1916) and his tragic dream-castle, burned down before he could move in.

Proceeding down the Valley of the Moon, the goal is Sonoma.

HERE WAVED the banners of Spain, Mexico (both Empire and Republic) and the Bear Flag of the short-lived California Republic (1846) before the Stars-and-Stripes took over. Virtually all of Sonoma is an historic shrine, and state restorations are usually in progress.

Visit the mission (1823), last in the California chain of 21. Look in at the Blue Wing Inn across the street, the Spanish Barracks, and the Vallejo family dwellings around the beautiful plaza.

Just west of town is Lachryma Montis, "Tear of the Mountain," the charming home of Gen. Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, commandant of the frontier for Mexico. It is a state museum.

IN THE OPPOSITE direction is the state's first winery, Buena Vista, founded in 1875 by the Hungarian Agoston Haraszthy. Visitors are welcome.

exciting concepts from Orinda pools

One reason more people are buying ORINDA pools this year is because ORINDA pools cost less to buy. Your ORINDA custom pool representative, in fact, can show you on paper that, not only is the base price lower in most cases, but when you add the options you want, the price advantage of an ORINDA pool becomes even greater.

And because it is an ORINDA pool, you get all the advantages of an ORINDA pool. The uncommon luxury of design and engineering by Orinda, and styling leadership that has made ORINDA Pools the best selling in northern California.

All of which is still just the beginning. *A giant Laars boiler is included with the 1967 Orinda Custom Royal Series providing low cost heating year long. You also have the traditionally conservative value of an ORINDA pool to enjoy. On top of all the other advantages.

Low monthly payments on ten year plan from northern California's oldest major pool builder.

Our Environment, And Damage That Mankind Is Doing To It

By DON KEOWN

"Man," said Dr. Carl B. Shoemaker, honorary president of the Audubon Society, "is the filthiest animal that has ever trod the earth."

"Moment in the Sun" by Robert and Leona Train Rienow supports that accusation with stunning impact, and adds the charges that he is also the most wasteful and destructive.

Worse yet, with all his vaunted reasoning power, man also appears to be hell-bent on his own ruination by over-producing his species so as to cause inevitably a food and resource famine—that could come much sooner than most think.

The Rienow book is a brilliantly done wrap-up of the indictment the conservation movement has long voiced against mankind. Once it could be minimized or ignored as the wailing of eccentrics. But no longer. It has required respectability, if not the urgency it demands. But "Moment in the Sun" may be just the thing needed to bring home to man the real immediacy of the monstrous threat he has posed to his environment. If it reaches enough readers, it could be one of the most important books of this century. If it does not, the consequence could be worse than regrettable —it could be tragic.

From an astonishing array of sources the Rienows have documented the manner in which man has exploited his resources, polluted his water, befouled his air, razed the trees, depleted the soil, poisoned plant and animal life, marred beauty, replaced quiet with din, reduced human dignity, destroyed privacy, fostered hunger, encouraged neuroticism and even insanity.

With much of his best land gone or now infertile, he now eyes greedily the sea, apparently unaware that he has already begun there the same ruinous cycle he has followed on the earth.

But most damaging of all, the Rienows warn us, is the manner in which man has, while recklessly wasting his essential resources, threatened a critical overpopulation problem through his unrestrained fecundity. The truth is that the world population growth is running far ahead of any increase in food production, and at a time when other resources are dwindling fast. Impossible congestion is already a disaster in many areas, and seems due to become world wide in the not very distant future. Nor is man's unwillingness to control his reproductive processes restricted to countries such as India and the Latin American states, often accused of that folly. Indeed, from the percentage standpoint, the population increase of these United States now exceeds that of India, according to the authors.

The Rienows reject glib assurances and vague panaceas with which man sometimes attempts to soothe his own fears. Too often, they say, we are fed, and swallow, patently phony remedies — suckers and scrub growth as replacement timber for cut virgin forests, low grade ores for high grade metals gone forever. Unhappy but essential facts are overlooked or downgraded, such as this country's growing dependence upon other countries for vital raw materials — stocks that are no more inexhaustable than were our own. Solutions such as shale as an endless source of oil are cited without mention of the immense difficulty, perhaps impossibility, of extraction.

The sea is held out as a source of perpetual bounty, although there is evidence man has already had devastating effects upon its harvests.

Fantastic schemes such as locating the population surplus in communities on the moon and planets or beneath the sea are presented seriously — proposals that could not possibly be implemented in time to save man if he continues at anything like his present rate of breeding.

The real solution, the Rienows make clear, lies in acceptance by man of limitations upon his reproduction, and in a planned program of rehabilitating and preserving our environment through cooperation with, rather than war against, nature.

Anyone who reads this book will understand why the Rienows write with real anger as well as alarm, and sometimes a bit extravagantly. The crime man has created against himself and God's creations is a monstrous one. The Rienows analyze it in terrifying detail.

MOMENT IN THE SUN by Robert and Leona Train Rienow, Dial Press, 286 pages, $6.

ON THE LOOSE by Terry and Renny Russell, Sierra Club, 122 pages, $6.95.

SKILLS FOR TAMING THE WILDS by Bradford Angier, Stackpole, 286 pages, $6.95.

A SMALL GEM of a book is "On the Loose" by the brothers Terry and Renny Russell.

It has some traits in common with other Sierra Club books. It is handsomely and tastefully designed and bound. The illustrations are superbly reproduced including some magnificent color. And underneath it all is an urgent plea for conservation of our dwindling wildernesses.

But in other respects it is a very different kind of book. It is in a small format, as contrasted to the heft and king-size of the Sierra Club's Exhibit Format Series volumes. The photographs, too, must necessarily be reproduced on a smaller scale, although it seems to have in no way dampened their impact.

The co-authors are not nationally-known writers, naturalists or photographers.

Which is by no means to say that Terry and Renny Russell do not know their cameras, their language or the outdoors.

This book does not zero in on any one beauty spot, but ranges widely over the western wilds, although the desert is a favorite subject. A truly extraordinary collection of photographs is accompanied by appropriate comment, always brief, some of it the Russells' own, some borrowed, but always very much to the point. The combination of pictures and words is one that has to be seen to be appreciated, but the result is one of those truly original and creative efforts that occur all too infrequently.

The genuine love these two young wanderers held for the outdoors shines from all the pages of the book. The bold script type in which it is printed is at first difficult to read, but one soon becomes accustomed to it. And it undeniably contributes, as does the generous use of white space, to the distinctive and distinguished appearance that further sets this book apart.

Sadly, Terry Russell was drowned in June, 1955, in the rapids of the Green River on one of those adventurous sojourns he so enjoyed. But the book had already been assembled, so that he could leave behind observations like these:

"The car has made our cities uninhabitable. It is also the best way to escape them. Hurry and take the road to the roadless area, because it won't be roadless for long . . . "

And: "It feels good to say 'I know the Sierra' or 'I know Point Reyes.' But of course you don't — what you know better is yourself, and Point Reyes and the Sierra have helped."

That kind of thinking, plus photographs and a book to match his words, is Terry Russell's legacy.

"SKILLS FOR Taming the Wilds" is just about the last word in the way of guidance for the outdoorsman.

Bradford Angier, a walking encyclopedia of woods wisdom, has aimed it not at the vacationer who drives his camper or tows his house trailer to the fringe of civilization and settles down there to relax, but at those who set out with backpack and a sense of adventure along trails that lead them far from the fumes, noise and frenzy of modern-day society.

Then comes the real challenge of making do with very little. Angier, a sort of contemporary Daniel Boone, has some solid advice, applicable regardless of the terrain or the climate in which you will be traveling by shank's mare.

He tells you how to select or make your backpack, how to build and use fire, how to hike most efficiently, how to utilize compass, map and nature for sense of direction, how to use the woodsman's tools and the rope, how to handle pack animals and canoes, how to find safe drinking water and how to erect shelters.

Especially fascinating is his counsel in finding and preparing the natural edibles in the wilds. And his campfire recipes sound both delicious and practical.

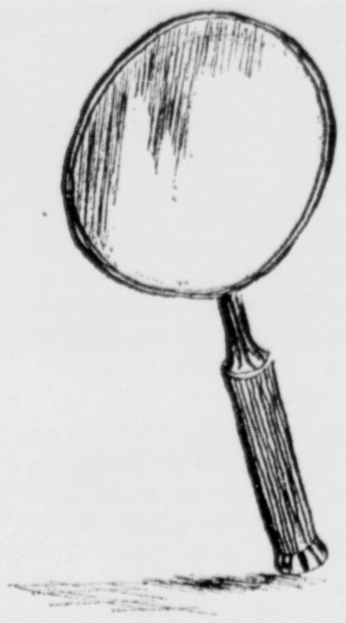
Angier also discusses the building of a cabin, the making of furniture, first aid, distress signaling and a thousand and one other useful topics.

Actually, Angier has produced a volume that covers the needs of the long-distance wilderness hiker with amazing thoroughness. And even the non-hiker who just likes to venture outside the city limits occasionally for a picnic will find much of the contents helpful.

Furthermore, Angier has written his book in a most readable style that reflects his zest for the outdoors. His enthusiasm is infectious.

Sleuths & Suspense

A NEW LEASE OF DEATH by Ruth Rendell, Doubleday, 214 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The author has employed the slightly understated, cleancut kind of narration that so often makes a mystery by a Britisher such a pleasure to read.

Rev. Henry Archery, Anglican clergyman, has a personal reason for looking into an old murder case in the town of Kingsmarkham. His son is engaged to the daughter of the man executed for the killing. But the reverend's investigations open up some old wounds and stir up difficulties for him and others.

There is a nice bit of romance along with the well-done suspense. Characters are strong, yet never exaggerated. Credit Miss Rendell with a job well done, and enjoy her book. She has the Agatha Christie touch.

A Novel About The Real Foe

THE SEA WALL by Marguerite Duras, Farrar, Straus and Giroux Inc., 288 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

This novel, translated from the French by Herma Briffault, was first published in 1950. However, it is uncomfortably pertinent today.

The story is about a white French colonial family's futile attempt to establish a home on the Mekong Delta, east of Saigon, in the late 20s.

Although the French authorities are pictured by Duras as the indirect antagonists to the struggling poor white settlers and the natives, the real foe is shown to be Nature. It is the Pacific Ocean that defeats this family.

A depressing and frustrating fact is illustrated by this book: Nature is a well organized foe of Man, and Man's great mistakes begin when he refuses to recognize his limitations against this foe.

THE LATEST Marin edition of the Northern California quarterly, Image, is another superb job, resplendent with colorful art and lively with interesting feature stories.

Included are a Harold Gilliam story on Muir Woods, profiles of filmmaker John Korty and designer-craftsman Art Carpenter, and some excellent color photographs of the Belvedere-Tiburon area accompanied by a text by Elizabeth St. Davids.

The quarterly sells for $1.25.

FROM OAK Publications of 701 Seventh Avenue, New York, comes "The Muse of Parker Street," a collection of the more recent work of northern California folk song writer Malvina Reynolds, who struck it big with "Little Boxes" and "What Have They Done to the Rain."

The softcover booklet has drawings by Jodi Robbin, a column by Ralph J. Gleason and an introduction by Mrs. Reynolds herself, along with the words and music to more than 50 of her tunes, most of them taking contemporary society to task for its foibles and pretense. With Mrs. Reynolds, the message is always pointed and persuasive. It is happy circumstance that the music is also catchy.

A Wife And Her Memories Of Life With A Great Man

CLARA MALRAUX / MEMOIRS, Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 372 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Should the wife of a great man reveal the scandals of his youth?

Not for the first time, Clara Malraux has been criticized for her lack of discretion and propriety. And not for the first time, she has insisted on her rights to be true to herself. Her memories of the Malraux's early years together are as candid as they are loving, and set down with a thorough disregard for public images, hers as well as his.

The memoirs have been translated by Patrick O'Brian, and it could not have been an easy job. Mrs. Malraux writes in a subjective, stream of conscious manner in the first half of the book. Her language is complex, her thoughts wandering and scattered. These early recollections are difficult to follow, but evidently the style parallels her bewildering childhood years.

Two countries, France and Germany, and three religions (the family was Jewish, her governess a strict Protestant, she was sent to a Catholic school) held sway, although her mother and father in fact were atheists. She had two different homes . . . the well-run Parisian establishment and the one in Germany, where "Gross-Mama," a colorful neurotic, ruled over a confusing group of uncles and cousins.

However, style and content of these richly woven memories clear up miraculously in the second half of her story. Clara, already to rebel against her family, meets Andre. She found him, at 19, an idealist who " . . . handled ideas admirably, was erudite in many fields; courageous . . . often touchy . . . he was free neither from snobbism nor from social awkwardness."

Their marriage began with a scandal; Andre's preference for playing the stock market (with Clara's money) instead of working for a living further outraged the relatives, as did his refusal to do his military service. But the final blow was their audaciously conceived and incredibly ill-planned Cambodia expedition that resulted in Andre's prison sentence. Clara got back to France, and her successful efforts to rescue him are a thrilling climax to these picturesque adventures. Here the author chooses to end her rememberances, although she and Andre stayed together for many more years.

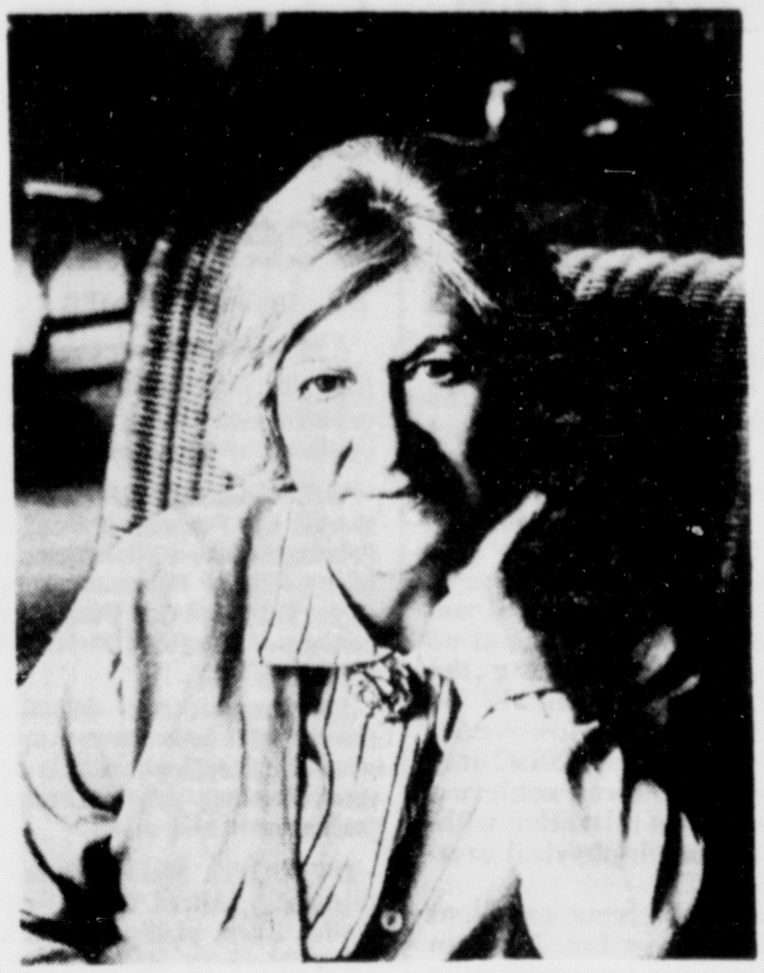
What happened afterwards? How did this brash adolescent grow into the great novelist and revolutionist?

As for the formidably free-spirited young woman he chose for a wife — most of all, the reader itches to know the rest of her story. No author could hope for a higher accolade.



CLARA MALRAUX has written her autobiography and the memoirs of her years with her famous husband, Andre, published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux under the title "Clara Malraux/Memoirs."

One Man's Ordeal In South Africa

THE JAIL DIARY OF ALBIE SACHS by Albie Sachs, McGraw-Hill, 285 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Bruce Coleman.

"I am off to the sea
I am free. I am free.
I am off to the sea."

These words Albie Sachs repeats joyously when he is on his six-mile run to plunge into the sea after being locked 168 days in solitary confinement for opposing the Union of South Africa's apartheid policy.

It is an exhilarating experience to "run with" Albie to the sea, but this is the only such experience in the diary.

Most of the days with Albie are quite desultory despite his good spirits. He makes games out of killing fleas (13 was his record for a day); he whistles tunes to a distant prisoner whom he cannot see; he sings and he jogs three miles a day in a tiny area to keep in shape physically and spiritually.

Sachs has no reading or writing material at first, other than a Bible which he reads. He scratches off the days on the wall and, at one point, tries writing with a tube of tomato-flavored cheese.

His only company are his interrogators. To them he gives a standard reply: "I'm not prepared to answer any questions. When I'm in court I'll be happy to answer all questions." But Sachs is not brought to court.

Sachs' style is a bit stiff but his sensitivity is strong when he describes the loneliness of jail life and moments when he fears for his sanity as well as his life. He could never be a Trappist monk, he says.

Here are some of Albie's reflections while imprisoned:

"This is a place of death. I desecrate it with my living."

"How slow thought is when one is all alone."

"You can't die from it (confinement) I console myself."

"No man is interdependent in his very depths."

"It would be to the benefit of all if the Whites could be persuaded that they stood to gain more by submitting to multi-racial majority rule than by fighting it out to the bitter end."

"The worst symptom of all I will not mention to the doctor when he comes; I'm losing the will to resist."

"If necessary I will die rather than give in."

Sachs does not give in. In fact, he finally gets paper, pencils and books and creates what he calls "word ladders." One, which he calls seven links in the chain, is: "jail — fail — fall — fell — feel — feet — fret — free."

This is the third revised edition. The first edition appeared in 1948. Several additions have been made including contributions of Chinese, Russian, Dutch and German mathematicians.

The book covers a very long period of time—from the very beginning of mathematics through the end of the 19th century.

Because of its length, many details have been omitted. However, extensive bibliographies are included at the end of each chapter.

Five Views Of Analysis And Freud

PSYCHOANALYSIS OBSERVED by Charles Rycroft, Coward-McCann, 165 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

Most people have an opinion on Freud and the value of psychoanalysis. Usually the less reading or personal experience they've had in the field, the more opinionated they are.

This facinating book is grist for their mill.

Five articles on the subject are edited here by Dr. Charles Rycroft.

Of the writers, Drs. Charles Rycroft, Anthony Storr and Peter Lomas are practicing analysts, John Wren-Lewis is a theologian and industrial scientist, and Geoffrey Gorer is Britain's best and most respected social anthropologist.

They cover the questions most vehemently debated by the layman: Does psychoanalysis cure? What is its scientific status? And what damage has it done?

The Grand Pattern For Our Universe

RED GIANTS AND WHITE DWARFS by Robert Jastrow, Harper and Row, 180 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

Today's layman often is confused by the seemingly erratic dartings of science in all directions toward new frontiers.

Jastrow's book brings a soothing thought that it still may be possible for a human mind to see a grand pattern in the universe. To today's student, Jastrow presents a lucid, simple introduction to new thoughts in the world of science.

Jastrow, a former nuclear physicist in Berkeley and theoretical physics teacher at Yale and Columbia, is now director of the Goddard Institute for Space Studies.

He brings two refreshing things to his book — the intellectual cross-fertilization of physicist excited with the discoveries of life-scientists, and a clear writing style that — until the last few years — very few scientific writers could display.

The red giants and white dwarfs of the title are stars; the subtitle of his volume — "The evolution of stars, planets and life" succinctly puts the point. Jastrow finds a grand progression of pattern, from the unthinkable time of cosmic creation to the present, from the rules by which the atomic particle exists to the nature of the virus to Darwin's theory of biological evolution.

The illustrations and accompanying captions are excellent; the text's simple language and organization benefitted from original use as a television series script.

The book is profitable for junior high school through adult readers.

Small Town Life From Earlier Era

THE LABYRINTH by Thomas Duncan, Doubleday, 348 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Has there ever been a small town saga without the saintly doctor? You know the one. Ignoring his own painful ailment, he tirelessly administers to generations of townfolk, privy to all their secrets, sorrows and scandals.

Here the good doctor presides over a rural hamlet in Iowa, just before the turn of the century. The author (whose "Gus The Great" was a best-seller) gives us in colorful detail a great railroad crash to open the story, and the reader anticipates more sharp glimpses into another time. But he gets instead a full helping of the adultery, incest, adolescent sex, castration (very big in this season's novels) that make up small town life or any era, as we all know, surely, by this time.

But as Duncan writes it down, it's rousing entertainment. One doesn't believe in anyone for a minute, and may well have forgotten the plot by the next morning, but at the time one stays happily glued to his well-polished, smooth-running story.

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania

FUN TIME is with us again. Modern living keeps most of us going at a fast pace. At times we "keep our noses to the grindstone" so long without any relaxing activities that we tend to get in a rut. Summer is the time to sandwich in some relaxation—shake out the cobwebs and live it up a little.

Relaxing does not have to be strenuous. In fact, if you have been doing little or no physical work during the year, activities should be tackled slowly. However, if you mix some MUSIC into your life, you can achieve a great deal of relaxation without too much physical exertion.

The pool is an excellent place to have fun. You can increase your enjoyment by piping a pair of stereo portable speakers that are connected back to the radio console. Or, if you don't have a pool, try listening to your favorite music while stretched out on a chaise lounge or barbecueing the steaks. Maybe its ping-pong in the back yard—try it with soft background music.

If your family is the traveling type, a car stereo will make those trips even more enjoyable. It need not be costly to add a simple car stereo. Some of the 4-track models merely set over the front center hump in the car with a couple of small speakers set in each corner of the front. Other models of the 4 and 8 track type merely fasten to the underside of the dash. It is really surprising how much enjoyment a car stereo can add to your trips. As individuals we have varying moods. It is very difficult to find radio programming to match our mood for any particular time. Even if we do, the next commercial and the next selection may be enough to have an upsetting influence. Remember, we are talking about those times when we are trying to get the most out of life, when we are trying to buoy up our spirits and get into the swing of things. Would you believe "Getting Turned On"?

For those families that have boats, I suggest you try my next venture. You guessed it—a 4-track stereo in the boat. Not that you will be listening to it above the roar of the engine, but after you're all "skied-out," there is nothing more relaxing than just letting the boat bob around like a cork while you're all sitting back absorbing the strains of your favorite artists in stereo—THAT'S LIVING!!

A checklist of recent releases from the high-quality, bargain-priced classics line, Turnabout, produced by Vox Records:

THE BAROQUE HARP — Works of Purcell, Pachelbel, Seixas, Hotteterre, Dancrieu and others—Elena Polonska, harp/ Roger Cotte and Guy Burand, recorders — Turnabout Stereo TV 34069S:

An unusual and delightful choice of instruments upon which to present some fairly unusual baroque music. Perfect performance and sound.

DVORAK: Slavonic Dances (complete), Alfred Brendel and Walter Klien, pianists — Turnabout Stereo TV 34060S:

This is the only complete recording of the original piano-four-hands version of this joyful music in the stereo repertoire. You should have this even if you already have the orchestral version.

BRAHMS: Hungarian Dances (complete), Walter and Beatriz Klien, pianists—Turnabout Stereo TV 34068S:

This is the music that prompted Dvorak's effort in the folk dance area, and is also in its original version for piano-four-hands. The first 10 numbers are gay, simple gypsy melodies; the rest are more sophisticated and suave. Excellent stereo.

GREGORIAN CHANTS for Lent and Easter—Choir of the Vienna Hofburgkapelle/Josef Schabasser, director—Turnabout Stereo TV 34070S:

Authentic, unadorned chants; complete translations included; good sound.

MOZART: Quartet for Oboe, Violin, Viola and Cello in F Major K. 370; Quintet for Horn and String Quartet in E Flat Major, K. 407; Trio No. 7 for Clarinet, Viola, and Piano in E Flat Major K. 498 — W. Triebskorn, clarinet/A. Sous, oboe/S. Huber, horn/Endres Quartet — Turnabout Stereo TV 34035S:

Intimate and expressive chamber works for unusual combinations. The "Horn Quintet" is the only Mozart work of its kind.

HAYDN: Lira Concerti—No. 1 in C Major; No. 3 in G Major; No. 5 in F Major — Hugo Ruf, lira and chamber ensemble—Turnabout Stereo TV 34055S:

While these singular pieces have been recorded before, this is the first time a genuine "lira" has been featured. The offbeat instrument uses both organ-type pipes and strings played by spinning wheels, both controlled through a piano-type keyboard. The pieces are excellent, and so is the lira-player and stereo. A gem of an album!

LOLA MONTES will present her company of Spanish dancers in two performances at the 1967 Marin Art and Garden Fair, now under way at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. The dancers will be seen on the amphitheater stage tonight at 8:30 o'clock, and Monday at the same hour.

DVORAK: Stabat Mater Opus 58—Suzanne Summerville/Grace de la Cruz/Lanos Korda/Lajos Kendy / Westphalian Symphony Orchestra/Recklinghausen Chorus/Hubert Reichert conducting —Vox Stereo SVUX 52026:

Again, no liner notes, but a complete translation. This is predictably a sad and tender piece of liturgical music, with little of the excitement of a Berlioz or Verdi requiem, but much very beautiful singing by both the fine soloists and the chorus. The two-disc Vox Twin set is almost as much of a bargain as the Turnabout discs.

DVORAK: Chamber Music Volume IV — Piano Trios Nos. 1 and 4; Piano Quartets Nos. 1 and 2; Bagatelles Opus 47 — The Dumka Trio with Walter Gerhart, viola — Vox Stereo SVBX 571 (three discs):

This is Dvorak-time for Vox, with the latest in what will total seven volumes covering this composer's complete chamber music. If you are a complete-set-nut, you'll naturally want this volume too. But even if you pick and choose, you'll find that most of the works contained here are unavailable in genuine stereo versions anywhere else, and the BBC artists making up the Dumka Trio are excellent in most respects. The unique "Bagatelles" are for harmonium, two violins and cello.

DVORAK: Cello Concerto in B Minor; SAINT-SAENS: Cello Concerto in A Minor — Mstislav Rostropovich, cello/Moscow Radio Orchestra / 1) Boris Khaikin 2) Grigory Stolyarov — Monitor Stereo MCS 2090:

Originating as a mono tape, this stereodisc has been re-channeled with good results. Take one of the most gorgeous concerti ever written, for any instrument, and combine it with one of the world's greatest cellists, Rostropovich, and you can't go wrong. The cello tone is full, rich and enveloping. The Saint-Saens work bores me to tears, but many listeners feel differently.

All in all, a fine bargain of a disc.

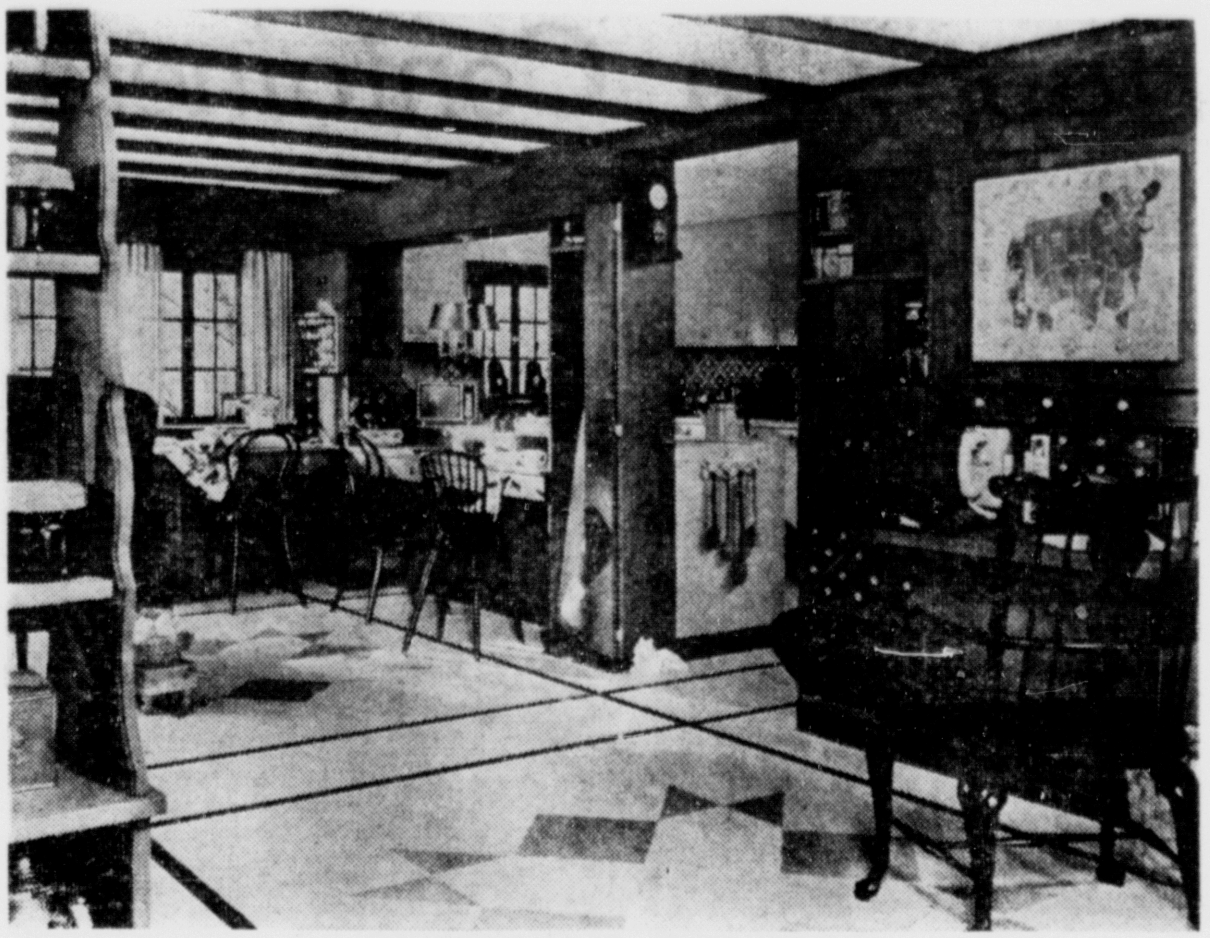
POET'S CORNER

POINT OF VIEW

I met an elephant, while stalking
In his jungle green.
Before I was seen,
I tasted the leaves he was eating.
I refused any further meeting.

The elephant saw me, while skulking
In my suburb brown,
Since he was in town,
He tasted the meat I was eating.
He fled, bleating.

MILL VALLEY GEORGE WHITSETT



THE PANTRY of today not only offers storage for provisions, but other accommodations such as sewing center for mother. The ceiling here is a suspended one, with panels of acoustical insulation board.

The Door Isn't Always A Door

A door provides a means of access. It is opened and closed. It is operated while in a vertical position.

All of these things are not necessarily so.

IF IT'S A flush door, which is completely lacking in trim, it can served quite a few purposes that have nothing to do with swinging on hinges. Its very absence of paneling and molding makes it ideal as a horizontal, smooth, fixed surface.

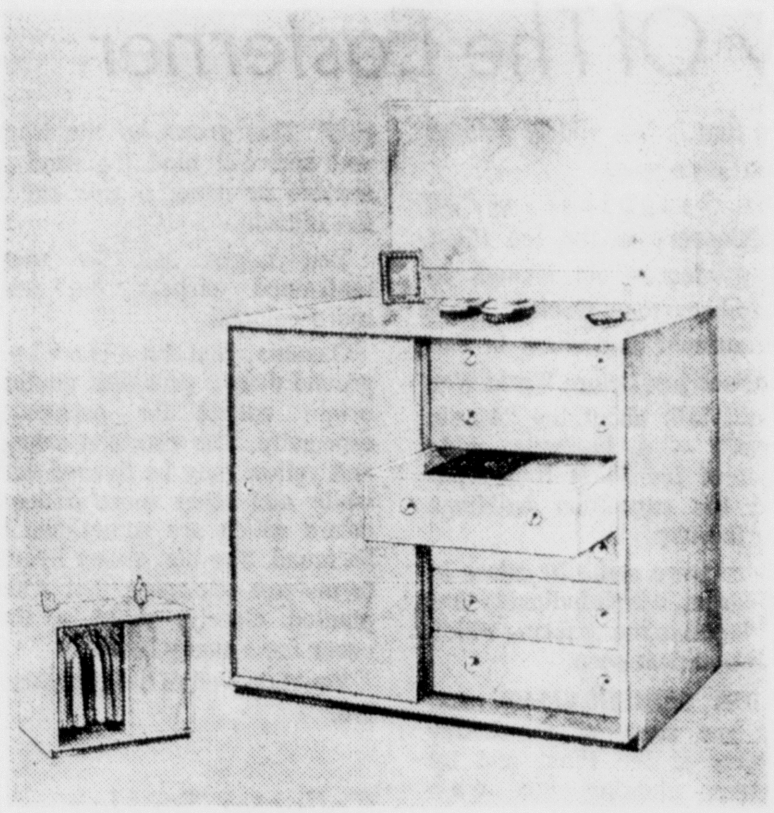
The unhandiest of handymen can produce a simple but practical and eye-pleasing coffee table merely by purchasing a flush door and ready-made legs of the kind that screw into baseplates. These baseplates are attached to the underside of the door-table with screws. The legs, which come in a variety of styles and sizes, have threaded tops which are inserted into the plates by turning in a clockwise direction.

Give the door a clear finish and you have a coffee table that will fit in with any decor, expecially if you select a wood that harmonizes with the rest of your furniture.

BY PLACING longer legs on the door, you can similarly make a dining table. It can be used regularly for that purpose or, because the legs can be so easily detached, used only when you have a houseful of company and need an emergency dining table.

In the latter case, the legless door can be conveniently stored for use at another time.

Flush doors also make excellent work surfaces for many endeavors, among them laying out patterns. And they are good for various types of games and as a foundation for train tracks when the use of the floor isn't practical.



FOR THE Easi-Bild pattern for this handy storage furniture, send 75 cents to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Mr. and Mrs. Wardrobe Pattern No. 723. One side holds suits, coats, etc., while five pull-out drawers accommodate shirts, socks, etc. Sliding drawers provide protection against dust.

The Pantry Returns, But With New Look And Added Functions

Converted Garage Or Carport Can Offer Storage And More

The "old fashioned" pantry is beginning to make a noticeable comeback, but its "new look" is a far cry from the popular pantry of grandmother's day.

The location can be relatively simple.

MANY OF THE homes built in recent years have a garage or carport located adjacent to the kitchen. Converting the garage into an all-purpose room for mother has several cost-saving advantages since the basic construction and the concrete subfloor are already in place.

In planning the room shown at left, a deliberate effort was made to create the effect of two separate areas. Storage dominates the foreground of the room. The other half is primarily a work center close to the kitchen.

The traditional effect of exposed ceiling beams compliments the rustic furnishings of the room and carries out the Colonial theme.

THE BEAMS IN this ceiling are different, however, in that they are part of a suspended ceiling system. This new suspended ceiling consists of two by four foot acoustical insulation board ceiling panels supported by a metal framework which is hung from the existing ceiling structure by wires. The "beams" are part of this supporting framework which is low in cost and easy to install.

The panels are simple to remove for access to pipes, ducts or wiring in the space above. Luminous panels may also be inserted for luminous ceilings.

The pantry includes the following features:

FOREGROUND — storage for holiday decorations, oven-size platters and pans, canned goods, preserves, flower pots and vases. Also, a built-in desk for meal planning, cabinets for cookbooks, a wine rack and a telephone with a long extension cord.

REAR HALF — a counter where breakfast can be readily served from the kitchen. Also a sewing table with built-in drawers for needles and thread, easy chair and television set for mother.

Plants Can Be Happy In Containers

Just About Everything Is Being Grown On The Patio

Garden Pages

There was a time when people who gardened in containers were either plant hobbyists or city dwellers fortunate enough to have a rooftop.

Today's garden puts more emphasis on surface areas such as decks and patios, with the result that container gardening has become commonplace. We grow everything from bulbs to roses in tubs and planters and are always looking for new ways to use them.

THIS IS A nice turn of events, for containers are a wonderful way to show off any plant material to its best effect.

Practically any plant you name will grow happily in a container for a certain period of time.

Camellias and azaleas, for instance, will thrive for a lifetime in tubs. Some trees and more vigorous shrubs may need eventual transplanting to larger tubs or to the garden, but in the meantime you've enjoyed their presence on your deck for several years.

JAPANESE Black Pine, for example, a sizable tree when mature, may be grown for a decade in a 24-inch redwood or ceramic tub. The same holds true with many other trees and shrubs.

One of the better choices for container culture is the Japanese Maple, a moderate grower which can be cultivated in anything from a gallon-size container to one 10-times that size. Both green-leaf and red-leaf varieties are available.

Bamboos are also ideally suited to tub culture, as are other accent plants such as New Zealand Flax and Pindo Palm.

ROSES ARE ideal for containers on a sunny deck. Floribunda varieties are especially recommended.

And don't overlook Dwarf Citrus, which not only thrive in tubs but often ripen their fruit better and faster when grown in this manner.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Set out varieties of Cushion Chrysanthemums for bloom through the summer months.
- Plant herbs in pots around your barbecue area and use them to improve the flavors (and odors) of outdoor cooking.
- Plant gardenias in partial sun and give them plenty of water and food. Work peat moss or bark into the soil before planting.
- Camellias set buds during summer for next year's bloom. Water them frequently, preferably in the morning by overhead sprinkling, to insure a good set.
- If you need quick color in a sunny bed, plant dwarf marigold. Dwarf dahlias are also a good bet.
- Fuchsias appreciate regular and frequent overhead waterings this time of the year.
- Regular lawn feeding, as well as watering, is especially important during the summer season.
- Garden too hot to enjoy on warm summer days? Consider the purchase or erection of some kind of garden shelter. It need not be elaborate.
- How is your garden for summer color? Now is the time to take stock of bare, drab spots, and to vow not to repeat the same sins next year.
- Don't let warm weather fool you. Regular applications of snail bait are still a wise precaution.

DWARF CITRUS in their many varieties offer gardeners ideal subjects for container culture. The fruit of most such citurs is edible as well as ornamental, and ripens earlier when grown in a tub than when raised in the orchard. (Photo courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

California's Carpets Of Color Are The Envy Of The Easterner

One of the nicest things about gardening in California is being able to grow groundcovers that bloom as brightly as annuals.

These carpets of color are often unique to our climate, for they succumb to the cold winters in gardens back east.

Ivy Geranium is one of the finest groundcovers whether it blooms or not, but bloom it does for months on end during spring, summer and fall. So named, not for its sprawling and rampant growth, but for the ivy character of its leaves, this geranium stands any degree of sun and will cover almost any plot of ground with its color.

THE BLOOMS are largely pink in delicate shades, and, more rarely, rose or red. There are mottled colorings to be found also, and even a lavender form that is less widely planted than it once was.

The brightest of all groundcovers is the Ice Plant and gardeners old enough to remember the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco just before World War II, still talk about the "Magic Carpet" — a fantastic, wide carpet of Ice Plant that separated the exposition buildings from the bay.

There were some 20 colors in that carpet, which indicates that Ice Plant has many forms which are too seldom seen.

YOUR NURSERYMAN can offer you some of the better varieties of Ice Plant and by judicious planting you can create your own "Magic Carpet." This grows on the worst soil and will bind the sand at seaside or cover a raw cut in the hillside.

You might ask for more restrained carpets, but none more colorful.

Gazania, that sun-loving ground daisy, provides another bright carpet for parkways, especially. The common orange and yellow may be livened with white and other more delicate colors which are sometimes to be found. The big, showy hybrid forms are clumping, but when planted closely, make a fine cover for a sunny bank.

You'd do well to look for them, too.

Collector Seeking Camellia Booklets

Some pamphlets published privately in this area for limited distribution are being sought by a collector, George E. Newton of 529 Pearl Street, Fayetteville, N. C., 28303, for a complete file of camellia publications that he is assembling.

The booklets are:

Shade Gardening Is Pleasant Task For Summer Days

When the summer sun climbs high and temperatures reach their peaks, most gardeners look for a spot of shade in which to ply their trade.

They find it under lath or under the spreading arms of a friendly tree. And, hopefully, there might be a garden pool which always enhances the setting and adds to the impression of coolness which all of us seek.

NOT ALL PLANTS thrive under these same conditions which make gardeners happy, however, so it's important to pick and choose with care.

Certainly some of the ferns should be included in any shade garden.

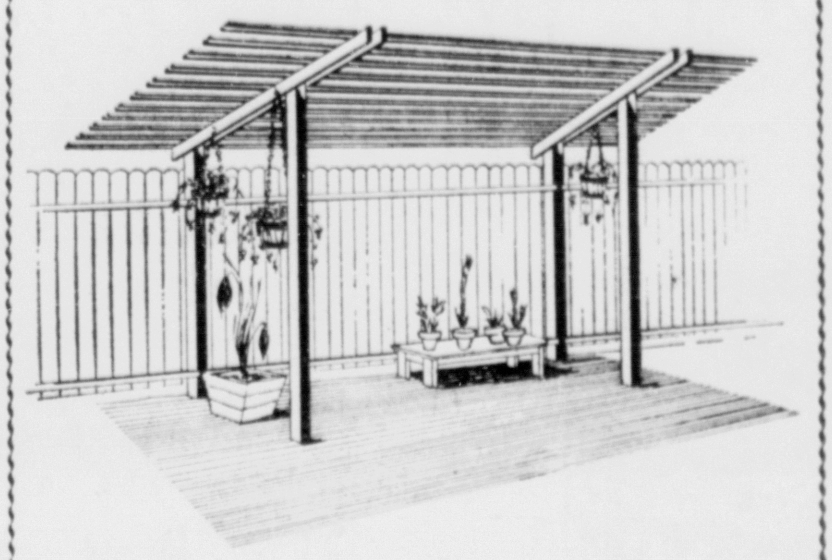
Ferns can easily become a hobby in themselves, for their number is varied and their propagation is fascinating. Suffice it here to include three or four interesting varieties, at least two of them in pots for removal to another strategic location whenever special accent is desired. A few pots of Maidenhair Fern and Holly Fern, plus a basket of Asparagus Fern will do nicely.

ALSO INCLUDED in your shade garden should be such brighteners as cyclamen in pots or in the ground, fibrous and tuberous begonias, pots of which may still be found in your nursery, and, where shade is not too dense, a few daylilies can add their color and charm.

Ageratum, the annual that best takes to shade, will give you bright mounds of blue, and Mignonette, that fragrant and fugitive flower from our distant past, seems equally happy there.

Both the Blue Lily of the Nile and its frequent companion, the pink amaryllis, do well in partial shade.

You'll find others once you start looking. In fact, shade gardening can become a full time occupation, if you want it to.



NO SHADE in the garden? Build your own. This structure was created with posts that are Douglas fir four-by-fours, beams that are two-by-fours and slat roof that is two-by-twos spaced slightly apart to filter, not block, sunlight. Shade-loving plants such as begonias and fuchsias will thrive there.

PLANTS YOU LEAVE BEHIND

What to do with your houseplant before you go on vacation depends on how long you plan to be away.

If your vacation will be only for a few days, water the plants well, set them on blocks of wood or stones in a basin of water, just high enough so that the pot bottom is touching water.

If you are going away for a week or two, water the plants, then drape them in a polyethylene bag such as your dry cleaner uses to protect your clothing. Use wire coat hanger to support the plastic and keep it from touching the plant — in tent fashion.

A good and willing neighbor is better than either of the above plans.

TV Turns Its Back On Motherhood

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Whatever happened to mother on the home screen?

"She has been ruled out by Nielsen," suggests writer-producer Edmund Hartman, referring to the audience-rating service.

HE APPEARS TO be right. Take a look at the major television series and you'll find a scarcity of mothers. Why?

"I'm not certain," adds Hartman. "But, whether it's a 'Bonanza' or 'The Monroes,' it seems that a show is more dramatic to eliminate the character of the mother."

Motherless shows apparently are funnier, too. Nobody is more convinced of that than Hartman, who happens to be producer of the 7-year-old "My Three Sons" and this season's success, "Family Affair." Both concern males — Fred MacMurray, Brian Keith — faced with the awesome task of rearing children without female help.

NEITHER SHOW has exactly been embraced by the critics. This, of course, rankles Hartman, a movie veteran who supervises and contributes to the writing of both series.

"I think the critics have underestimated 'My Three Sons'," Hartman insists. "A show that is going into its eighth year must have something.

"The thing that I think intrigues viewers is how a man copes with a growing family without a woman's touch. From that simple premise, we are able to say things about the human situation that strikes a response.

BRIAN KEITH
An amateur parent

"MANY OF THE critics said that 'Family Affair' was a carbon copy of 'My Three Sons.' It isn't. In 'Family Affair,' Brian Keith plays an amateur parent; he has the option of dropping the kids at any moment. Here we have the mystery ingredient of Keith, a rugged type, in a domestic situation.

"We also have Sebastian Cabot, who is the most unlikely of persons to be faced with rearing children. His reluctance and disdain are eloquent."

Whether an original or a carbon copy, "Family Affair" was one of the rare new shows to survive the 1966-67 season.

Hollywood's Sarong Girl Plans Stage And Television Comeback

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — South Seas music, please, maestro. Dorothy Lamour is back.

Not, of course, in her famous sarong. That's in the Smithsonian, near another historic display, Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis.

But Miss Lamour — tall, willowy, still beautiful at 49 — wants to prove something:

"I DON'T THINK people in the industry think I can act. I don't say I'm a great actress. But I do say I can act."

Accordingly, she and her husband of 24 years, William Ross Howard III, have sold the Baltimore house where they've lived for eight years.

They're moving back to Hollywood and next September Dorothy starts a 40-week road tour as star of "Hello, Dolly!" A couple of weeks ago she guest-starred as an Arabian shiek's daughter on "I Spy." She appeared on Joey Bishop's show and others.

A COMEBACK? Says Miss Lamour: "Let's just say I want to be more active than I have been."

The onetime New Orleans beauty pageant winner, Chicago elevator operator and touring band singer made more than 50 movies. In "The Road to Singapore" and other Hope-Crosby "Road" pictures, the scrap of colored cloth she wore, plus a gardenia in her dark, waist-long hair, stamped her as "the Sarong Girl."

DOROTHY LAMOUR
A tour as "Dolly"

"I was typed mostly as the highest-paid straight woman in the business," she said without rancor. "I worked with Cantor, Berle, Skelton. I'd have a line like, 'Look!' — and that would plant a joke for them."

EIGHT YEARS AGO there were no more movie offers. She wanted to devote more time to her two growing sons. So the family moved to Baltimore, her husband's home. They'll still have an apartment there and commute to his meat-sauce-and condiment business.

"I love to cook and do things around the house," Dorothy said, "but sometimes the boys would say, 'Hey, dad, we'd better put mom back to work again. She's getting jumpy.'

"I'd do a night club or hotel and be fine again. I guess I just have to release the ham in me."

THREE YEARS AGO she forced herself to start doing plays in summer stock. Theater audiences still scare her. But "Dolly" will be "an agony I adore."

She has spread the word to producers of "Bonanza," "Gunsmoke" and other drama series: "Find me a good part, put me in as Dorothy Howard, and I'll prove something."

As she spoke, in a booth at the Brown Derby, admiring women lined up for her autograph.

Character Actor Likes Steady Work His Occupation Brings

UPI Hollywood Correspondent
By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The life of a television character actor has its advantages — steady work, excellent wages and freedom from fear.

A video star or leading man must live and die with his series. The character man just moves on to another show.

FRANK CADY, the bald storekeeper of "Petticoat Junction" and "Green Acres," has been a character actor since he was in his 20s, thanks to premature loss of hair. Stars have come and gone, but Frank has as much work as he can handle — and probably will have until he decides to retire.

He and his wife, Shirley, married 26 years, are the parents of 19-year-old Steve, who is off with the Army Signal Corps. Their daughter Cathy, 16, lives at home with her parents.

Home is a modern house on a half acre of rolling suburbia in Woodland Hills at the far reaches of the San Fernando Valley.

INSIDE, THE Cadys have given vent to their passion for things Mexican and Spanish, the result of trips to both countries. Art work, paintings and colors all reflect the warm tones of both Latin countries.

Most of their furniture, however, is antique, passed down from three generations of Cadys native to California.

The house has three bedrooms, a den and family room, but no swimming pool. Cady believes pools are more trouble than pleasure. He and Shirley do their own gardening and housework. A pool would be added work and expense, he says.

FRANK IS A member of the Hollywood Hackers, a group of duffers who play golf at various country clubs in Southern California with outrageous trophies for winners of a variety of tournaments.

The family also likes to rock hound on the desert, bringing home unusual stones and rocks for the extensive garden.

The family includes a foundling mutt, Stormy, and two cats Patch and Shelly, who romp in and out of the house at all hours excepting dawn.

FRANK FINDS himself alone at 5:30 a.m. when he arises during the work week. He prepares his own breakfast (bacon and eggs) and heads for the freeway. If traffic is light he can make it into General Service studios in a half hour. If the freeway is jammed it may take him more than an hour.

Because he isn't one to the stars of either the CBS-TV shows, Cady's hours vary. He may work only an hour or two or for 12 hours straight, depending on the size of his role that week.

Frank and Shirley entertain infrequently, although they are bridge nuts and often play cards with neighbors.

"WE DON'T HAVE any friends in show business," Cady explains. "We have wonderful neighbors; doctors, lawyers, engineers and such. We have potluck dinners once in a while and that's about it. We don't go out much either. Why should we? We like it at home."

Cady is convinced that character acting is an excellent occupation. He is only slightly annoyed by the fact that people see him on the street and snap their fingers in recognition but can't recall his name.

"The publicity always goes to the stars," he grins. "And they can have it."
